Fear Wrong-Direction Traffic

State Won't Open Rte. 53 At Intersection Of I-90

The state of Illinois has no intention of opening Ill. Rte. 53 at the point it intersects Interstate 90 because of the danger of traffic moving the wrong direction on the interstate, Sigmund Zielewski, state transportation engineer, said last week.

In answer to a suggestion that Rte. 53 be made a southbound exit from Interstate 90, Zielewski said the danger of the traffic attempting to enter the federal highway from Rte. 53 makes that alternative prohibitive.

Officials from Elk Grove Village, Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates have been concerned about the movement of traffic along Interstate 90 and Ill. Rte. 53 since the opening of the interstate in September and the dead-ending of Rte. 53 where it joined the interstate.

Reaching Alexian Brothers Medical Center on Blesterfield Road in Elk Grove Village also has become a problem for traffic coming to the village from the northwest.

ZIELEWSKI SAID in an effort to enable traffic to find the quickest route to the hospital signs have been placed on Ill. 72 and Arlington Heights Road for westbound, eastbound and southbound traffic.

George Richter, operations engineer at the Illinois Highway Department, said there also are some informational signs for Alexian Brothers Medical Center posted on Rte. 53.

He said that the hospital has requested that signs be placed on Interstate 90, but the hospitals can only be marked on interstates if they have been designated as trauma centers.

"The Illinois Department of Public Health lists all hospitals certified as trauma centers, and so far Alexian Brothers Medical Center has not been designated as one," Richter said. He added that the federal highway markers for hospitals would have a symbol for a hospital on it and would not carry the name of the hospital.

AN OFFICIAL AT the Cook County Highway Department said yesterday so far he had not received a request for highway markers on county highways around the village, but the matter would be looked into.

Meanwhile Elk Grove Village and Schaumburg fire departments have worked out a cooperative arrangement for handling emergencies on the section of Interstate between Thorndale Avenue and Ill. Rte. 72.

Elk Grove Village Fire Chief Allen Hallett said if there was an accident or fire in the northbound lane of the interstate, Schaumburg will respond. If something happened in the southbound lanes, Elk Grove Village fire department would handle it and transport patients to Alexian Brothers hospital.

Yes, Virginia, Even Santa Takes Pay

by TONI GINETTI

If you have kids at home, please don't let them see this. I'd hate to be the one blamed for spoiling a sacred childhood belief.

I've just found out that Santa Claus gets paid. That's right; he gets paid for giving presents and spreading good cheer at Christmas time. Not only that, he gets paid pretty well in my opinion, $3 an hour!

At least that's what he makes at Woodfield. I found that out when I noticed an ad in the job section advertising for a Santa Claus for the mall. What does it take to be Santa Claus?

"A fat man with a deep voice," said Jerry Dempsey, with a laugh. He is the man at Woodfield who will decide this week who will be the mall's Santa. "Seriously, though, it's one of the hardest things to do all year. We never anticipate a smooth-running operation."

DEMPSEY EXPLAINED this was so because, as terrible as this may sound, being Santa is "the toughest, most physically draining and mentally mind-bending experience there is. It's worse than digging ditches!"

"You have to realize 'Santa' has to pick up just about every child, and that amounts sometimes to a child a minute. The complaints at the end of the day are always of stiff arms and sore backs, as if they were chopping wood all day," he said.

In fact, Dempsey said, the job is so demanding that it's just too much for one person to handle. Santa's 70-hour work week will be manned in shifts by six persons. Incidentally, women need not apply because, while Dempsey said he'd be willing to talk to a girl if she came in for the job, "we try to stick to the traditional kind of concept of Santa that will come across best psychologically for the kids."

He's got a point there. But sometimes outside appearances might not tell the true story of a person's qualifications for a job like Santa's. Take, for example, what might happen if one of the some 15 applicants Dempsey interviews this week was the real (yes, Virginia) Santa. A standard job interview might not turn out too well.

"I saw your ad in the paper for Santa Claus, so I thought I'd come down and find out what you wanted," Santa might say.

"I TAKE IT you'd like to apply for a job as Santa," the interviewer asks.

"Not AS Santa, I AM Santa."

"I see," the interviewer says, trying to humor him. "Your name is Santa Claus?"

"No, my name is Christopher Kringle, but many children prefer to call me Santa or St. Nicholas."

"Is that so," the interviewer answers cautiously. "All right Mr. Kringle, let's just fill out this application. Do you live in the neighborhood?"

"NO, I LIVE in the North Pole."

"And how would you get to-work each day?"

"Well I have this team of eight tiny reindeer who can fly my sleigh here in no time."

The interviewer wipes his brow and then asks, "I'll need some references and information on past job experience."

"For the past 100 years I've worked one night a year delivering toys to good children all over the world," he answers. "The rest of the time I supervise the work at my toy factory."

"Then you're self-employed."

"YOU MIGHT SAY that. As for a reference, you could put Mr. Clement Moore."

"And what is your relation to Mr. Moore?"

"Oh, he's just a friend. I visited him one Christmas Eve and he wrote a poem about me."

"One last question, Mr. Kringle, do you have any dependents?"

"Oh, yes, 150 elves."

"I DON'T KNOW whether the IRS will allow that many," the interviewer answers nervously.

"Well, that's okay, I wouldn't want to cause any trouble," Santa answers as he rises from his chair. "If that's all the questions, may I ask when I start the job?"

"Let me put it this way, Mr. Kringle, don't call us, we'll call you."

Worker Dies In Cave-In

A construction worker was killed early yesterday afternoon by a cave-in at the Moon Lakes Apartments in Hoffman Estates.

The accident, which took the life of Sis-fuentes Andres, 35, of 815 Ash St., Waukegan, occurred when a large mound of clay fell into a ditch Andres and another man were digging.

Andres was pronounced dead on arrival at Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights. A co-worker, Escamille Leonardo, 28, of 65 Clayton St., Waukegan was treated and released from the hospital.

Both men were employed by the Rosetti Construction Co. of Rolling Meadows.

Police said the accident occurred about 1:30 p.m. near Moon Lake Dr. in the apartment complex.

THE PAIR was taken to the hospital by the Hoffman Estates Fire Protection District ambulance.

Firemen said that Leonardo had only been struck by the falling dirt when the cave-in occurred. He was able to free himself from the ditch where the two men were digging a sewer line.

Andres was however completely buried by the cave-in. Fellow workers labored to free him and firemen said his body was completely uncovered when they arrived on the scene.

Project Redball Set Saturday

The Schaumburg Jaycees will begin their "Project Redball" campaign Saturday with a door-to-door campaign throughout the village.

The program is aimed at getting parents to place a small redball decal in their children's bedroom windows.

The program has been approved by both Schaumburg Mayor Robert Atcher and Fire Chief Lloyd Abrahamson.

Fire officials have said the placement of the decals in the windows allows firefighters to quickly distinguish which rooms have young occupants. Firemen can check those rooms first in the event of a fire.

Members of the Jaycees will attempt to deliver the decals to every home in the village.

Additional decals can be obtained from the village hall and both fire stations.

Jaycees distributing the decals can be identified by blue name tags and red berets.

Howie Plans Asked

Proposals for consultant reviews of the Howie-In-The-Hills development plan are being solicited by the Village of Hoffman Estates, and cost estimates are expected this week.

Village Manager George Longmeyer said yesterday he has contacted outside firms for review of specific areas of the plans, and village employees already are examining other areas. The village's water engineering consultant has been asked to quote a price for review of provisions for water supply and sewer installations. The firm is Greeley and Hansen. Asked to quote a fee for review of provisions for fire protection was National Loss Control Service Corp., the same firm which is currently studying a proposed village takeover of the Hoffman Estates Fire Protection District.

Comments on fire service needs also were requested from Deputy Fire Chief Ed Kalasa.

VILLAGE ENGINEER John Hossack has been asked to review potential effects on traffic and provisions for water retention, said Longmeyer. The village manager commented the plan does provide for some water retention, which he described as "not near enough." But he added "I'm not an expert."

An outside planner may be hired to examine the entire plan, depending on the response from these preliminary sources, said Longmeyer. He noted the plan does not "have that much detail yet," and review at this stage is only preliminary.

Longmeyer expects responses from the various parties studying the plan in a week to a week and a half, he said. After receiving the reactions, the village may respond to Meridian Investment and Development Co., new owner of the property pending receipt of clear title and satisfactory zoning.

NERIDIAN PURCHASED the property from federal receivers liquidating assets of the bankrupt City Savings Association of Chicago.

Details of the plan have not been made public by the village, on advice of attorneys, to avoid possible jeopardy to settlement negotiations now pending in suits involving the village and the receivership.

Halloween Pennies Plan Favored

The Schaumburg Area Council of PTA supports the Illinois National Congress of PTA decision to encourage giving pennies to children at Halloween instead of candy or foods.

Mrs. Mary Mozal, council member, said the Illinois Congress of PTA at its May convention will ask all PTAs to vote on the action it proposes.

The Schaumburg council not only wants parents to know how it feels about this now, but urges them to start the practice of giving pennies instead of treats this Halloween, said Mrs. Mozal.

She said there have been many reported incidents of children being injured by sharp objects placed in fruit and toxic additives in candy.

"The giving of pennies would eliminate the danger of injury," she said.

Thousands Must Prove Voter Eligibility

Thousands of registered voters in the Northwest suburbs have been challenged to prove their eligibility, or be unable to vote in the Nov. 7 general elections.

The widespread distribution of notices informing voters "to show cause why registration to vote should not be canceled" apparently stems from the efforts of overzealous canvassers attempting to remove from registration rolls persons who have changed their names, moved or died.

A spokesman for the election department in the Cook County clerk's office said voters who received the notices but who have not changed their names or addresses, can disregard the stipulation that they appear in person before the Board of Revision in Chicago yesterday or today.

To remain registered, however, voters who received the notice must mail it to the board's office, Room 402, County

Building, 188 N. Clark St., Chicago, by the end of this week.

The notice should be signed attesting to the voter's eligibility but need not be notarized, the spokesman said.

THE CLERK'S office on Monday was deluged with "millions of calls from all over," according to the spokesman.

The distribution of registration cancellation warnings apparently was not politically motivated. In many cases, newly registered voters received the notices. In some cases, persons who have lived at the same addresses for 15 years were challenged. And in other instances some members of a family were challenged and not others.

"What are they trying to do," said one Palatine village trustee, — disenfranchise everyone?"

The notices were distributed over the weekend, signed by the Republican and Democratic canvassers in each precinct.

The canvassers are selected by precinct committeemen, and serve as judges on election days.

Palatine Township Clerk Ruth Ellen Blowney said canvassers are supposed to verify that persons listed on the registration rolls are still eligible to vote.

In cases where an individual is not at home when the canvassers arrive, they are to leave a pink slip asking the person to contact them within 48 hours. Mrs. Blowney said, or a final notice will be sent by mail informing the person that unless he appears at the county office, his registration will be cancelled.

In many cases, however, the pink slips were not received, or were received after the final notice, she said.

Palatine village officials are making available form letters for qualified voters who received notices of disenfranchisement. The forms are available at village hall, 54 S. Brockway St.

This Morning In Brief

The State

The president of largely black Malcolm X College charged that authorities investigating the alleged "De Mau Mau" murders of nine white persons perpetrated for political reasons "the myth that black people come out of the ghetto, sweep down and kill the whites."

Ironically, Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie's call for a special legislative session on tax and school finance drew some Democratic praise and a hint of indifference from one high-ranking Republican, Senate President Pro Tem Cecil Pardee of Chicago.

A defense attorney argued that the prosecution's evidence is "wholly insufficient" to convict Cook County State's Atty. Edward V. Hanrahan and 13 co-defendants in the Black Panther police raid case.

Bernard Carey, Republican candidate for Cook County state's attorney, said he has appealed to President Nixon to station federal marshals in Chicago to prevent vote fraud in the November election.

Actress Jane Fonda, leading a group of antiwar activists speaking to Southern Illinois University's Carbondale campus said President Nixon has escalated the war and that Sen. George McGovern could end it.

The Nation

A small army of police fanned out through Brooklyn and three suburban counties, carrying subpoenas for 677 persons linked with an "organized crime headquarters" which had been under surveillance for a year. A district attorney said the headquarters was in a trailer in an automobile junkyard.

The Supreme Court voted 7-2 to refuse another legal effort to have the Vietnam War declared unconstitutional.

President Nixon made an unscheduled visit to a convention of families of American POWs and promised that "under no circumstances" would the men be abandoned. He also said their men had paid too high a price in Vietnam for him to grant amnesty to those who refused to serve there.

Dynamiters blew up railway tracks and riot police smashed locks on downtown stores that defied an army order to open during nationwide strikes which have crippled Chile. Chile's top Communist official said a "revolt" was underway. While police smashed the locks, hundreds of demonstrators screamed, "Chile is and always will be a land of liberty."

The War

Heavy fighting erupted in the war-scarred mountain jungles outside of Hue, while far to the south, Vietnamese government troops reopened a major highway into Saigon. U.S. planes battered an airfield far north of Hanoi. Three American aircraft were reported lost in operations elsewhere in Indochina.

PREPARATORY TO its Nov. 30 convention, Schaumburg United Party (SUP) plans soon to announce open platform hearings. Under guidance of Laurel Dulaney, SUP platform chairman, sessions are scheduled for Oct. 26 and Nov. 2 (both Thursdays) at Schaumburg High School.

Formerly of Hoffman Estates, Mrs. Dulaney once served as secretary to that village's combined planning and zoning board during a previous administration. She is now a Schaumburg plan commissioner and has been acclaimed a most ardent SUP devotee and worker since the party was formed 14 months ago. Insiders feel she could well emerge the party's first lady trustee nominee.

IN HOFFMAN Estates, usually on-target speculators say current odds favor the next village clerk coming out of the Winston Knolls subdivision.

MEANWHILE VILLAGERS continue to wonder if Schaumburg Township GOP forces seriously intend to cut the cord (in name only) in Hoffman Estates next municipal election.

Liberating workers to support independent tickets of their choice might prove a face-saving gesture if Republican strength cannot be closely assessed in advance. Or, maybe they are just holding off until the Nov. 7 election is in the bag. Or, waiting for a local Democratic or other independent show of strength. Or...

TODAY, MEMBERS of Schaumburg-Hoffman Area Provisional League of Women Voters will be calling on local businesses and concerned citizens in order to raise $2,000 to continue and expand their work.

Hopefully, area business people will open their ears to League plans to involve more citizens in community activities and open their pocketbooks to include a much appreciated donation.

RECENT SCHAUMBURG birthday people include Sara Sanders and Bob Minuti.

"ONLY HE who says nothing talks too much," said Chicago producer Les Lear over lunch at the Woodfield Inn last week.

BOOKS NOT bubbles go in the bathtub with Eric Smith. The refurbished tub is set in an old Blackhawk School first graders, Debbie Jarka and Eric Smith. The refurbished tub is set in an old closet area of the school redecorated by parents for use as a reading nook. Teachers and students agree the tub is an unusual, but fun place to read.

Bricks May Not Be Used

Although the Village of Schaumburg already is committed to pay $2,500 for bricks for its new civic center municipal building, a decision will not be made until Saturday or Oct. 24 on whether to use the material.

After the village ordered the brick, a salt-glazed material made with the same process as brick used in old farm silos, it learned the federal environmental protection agency (EPA) intends to halt production. A stop order was put through, said Village Mgr. John Coste, but the first order already was in production. The order was for specially made bricks for corners and other irregular points in the building.

The EPA has not yet halted production, but has informed the manufacturer it will at some future date, because the production process emits smoke violating federal standards, Al Eichsteadt, architect said. He earlier told the board it might be possible to order a sufficient supply of the bricks now to complete at least early phases of the civic-cultural complex.

EICHSTEADT WAS instructed to investigate another source of the material, and examine possible blendings of the salt-glaze brick with other possible bricks in an irregular pattern, to permit use of the already ordered shipment.

A special meeting will be called for Saturday or for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, before the regular board session, to decide either on the salt-glaze bricks, another type of brick or a combination.

Break Ground For Medical Building

Ground has been broken for a new medical professional building at 129 S. Roselle Rd., Schaumburg, Dr. Howard Baker, local orthodontist, announced.

The 12,000 square foot facility, expected to be ready for occupancy in six months, will contain offices for Baker and four other local dentists. They are: John Corsten, Richard Schmidt, Frank Honig and Gerald Malek.

Space also is available for others interested in occupying the building, Baker added.

24 Boys Join Cub Pack At Campanelli

Twenty-four boys were welcomed into Cub Pack 195 at the first meeting Sept. 29 at Campanelli School. The new cubmaster, it was announced, will be Ron Brock.

The new cubs are: Kevin Fisher, Daniel Panica, Guy Harrison, Brian Legg, Edward Pap, Michael Wohlsart, David Amaltis, Eric Lathrop, Brian Frohn, Tony Milka, Robert Montemurro, John Hamaker.

Others include, Tommy Reid, Jeff Nelson, Anthony Seklocki, Jeff Piedmont, Roy Thompson, Paul Simkus, Scott Simkus, Robbie Van Duyse, Joe Paszkiewicz, John Huber, Gary Bennett, and Gary Walter.

Many of the 87 boys in the pack received awards at the meeting. The third place trophy that the pack won for its Septemberfest float was presented to Ms. Susan McCann, principal of Campanelli, and Mrs. Arnold, president of Campanelli PTA, the pack's sponsoring institution.

Future plans for the pack include a goodwill project for the second week in November. The boys will collect canned food for distribution to needy families in the area.

Twp. Library To Publish Newsletter

A newsletter and informational brochure to inform Schaumburg Township residents about the Schaumburg Township Public Library will be distributed soon.

Library board members approved spending $500 for printing a quarterly newsletter to inform residents about new special programs and a brochure that outlines rules and regulations and tells what the library provides.

Board members agreed with Librarian Michael Madden's comment that "we must publicize our library and let people know we are here."

Madden will also prepare a film suitable for showing to school children and plans to offer it to Schaumburg Township School Dist. 54.

Leukemia League Will Hold Fund-Raiser

The Northwest Chapter of the Leukemia League, Inc. will hold its annual fund-raising event at 7:30 p.m., Saturday at the Golden Acres Country Club, Roselle Road, Schaumburg. Tickets can be purchased at the door or by calling 894-8283.

An evening of fun and prizes is promised.

Kids Can Curl Up With A Good Book In School Bathtub

by JERRY THOMAS

You can hop in the bathtub to curl up with a good book at Blackhawk Elementary School in Hoffman Estates.

Tub time is not only a Saturday treat for primary grade students but part of their Monday through Friday study time.

Teachers and children alike agree that being in unusual places makes reading and learning more fun.

At Blackhawk School the reading tub is unusual enough without being in a closet. Principal Roy Broderson said several parents and teachers got together and decided a reading nook was more important than the hall closet storage area was.

They emptied the cozy but crowded nook of its junk, took off the double doors and let their imagination take over.

A group of parents paneled the area and brought in a rocking chair. Wall hangings were made from various materials. They not only gave color to the corner but tickled the children's senses because of their unusual textures.

Broderson said the tub, donated by Stompanatto Plumbing, Roselle, was the finishing touch. Colorfully decorated and padded with fat cushions, it has become a favorite reading spot for students.

First Aid Teacher Practices What He Preaches

by STEVE BROWN

The old adage, "practice what you preach" has been around for many years, but for one Schaumburg resident the familiar saying took on much more meaning recently.

Ken Dopp, a jack of all trades in the area, had just finished teaching an American Red Cross first aid class at Fremd High School in Palatine and was on his way home when he witnessed a serious auto accident.

Dopp rushed to the assistance of one of the injured persons and began to administer first aid procedures.

"I found myself hard-pressed to follow my own teaching," Dopp explained. He added just minutes before the crash, he had concluded a class on first aid theory.

"ONE OF THE MOST important elements is to gain the confidence of the patient, and this was a real test," Dopp said.

He admitted that scene was not a pretty one and that he felt a little "squeamish" when he first arrived at the scene.

Dopp said that within minutes several Lake County police officers and an ambulance unit from the Lake Zurich Fire Department arrived.

"It was beautiful to see five strangers, all with training, instantaneously operate as a team," Dopp remarked. He said the quick work enabled the man to reach emergency treatment much quicker.

He also said the incident brings home the need and importance of first aid training. Dopp said in most cases the only people to take the training are those required by law to do so.

"THIS IS SOMETHING that everyone should know, because you never know what situation you might become involved in," Dopp explained.

An environmental technician for the Palatine Health Department, Dopp finds the time to teach the first aid class several nights each week.

"It is incidents like this that make me glad that I am prepared to help out and I think that everyone should take the time to get the training," Dopp said.

U.S. Agencies Study Watershed Pact

The Upper Salt Creek Watershed Agreement is now being circulated among various federal agencies in Washington, D.C., prior to being submitted to the Congress for approval of federal funding.

Barry Good, legislative assistant to Sen. Adlai Stevenson III, D-Ill., said Monday the agreement must be reviewed by 10 agencies. The comments these agencies have on the agreement will be included in a report to the Senate public works commission.

The commission will then take action on the possible federal funding of the project.

IF THE COMMISSION recommends approval of federal funds, and Congress can act on the measure in the next legislative session, the funds would be available for the 1974 fiscal year which starts July 1, 1973.

The Upper Salt Creek Watershed Agreement is a $26.5 million plan to build flood controls across the creek. Federal funds for approximately half the cost of the project are being requested. These funds would be administered through the U.S. Soil Conservation Service.

The balance of the funds would come from state and local government agencies. Sixteen state and local agencies signed the agreement before it was sent to Washington in mid-September.

On Sept. 18, Gov. Richard Ogilvie announced the state would not wait for federal funding, but would expand the program and begin work at once. The governor made his announcement after suburban areas along the creek had suffered extensive flood damage.

On Friday, the U.S. Soil Conservation Service approved the state's plan to begin work on a flood control in the Busse Woods section of the Ned Brown Forest Preserve.

On Dean's List

Three Schaumburg students have been named to the dean's list for the spring quarter at Southern Illinois University. Receiving grade point averages of 4.25 on a 5 point scale were Kenneth Kurgan, 313 Ferni Ct.; Donald Litchfield; 911 Knightsbridge Ln. and Jon Nitti, 1310 N. Valley Lake Dr.

Former Jet Pilot Fighting A Different 'War'

by JAMES VESELY

William Speicher, a man with pilot's eyes and a border-state drawl in his voice, is a combatant in a peculiar war.

Maybe "combatant" is too strong a word since Speicher often goes into his fray armed only with good intentions and whatever facts his mind can hold on ecology, mass transit, property values, engine exhaust systems, flight patterns, federal and state aviation legislation, zoning laws, and of course, why your baggage went to Omaha instead of Minneapolis.

Speicher, of 1734 Cambourne, Schaumburg, is by profession the man in the middle. He is the tip of the arrow of United Air Lines, the man in front who represents consumer relations for the enormous corporation just at a time when consumers are taking on the merciful ways and subtleties of, say, the hordes of Genghis Khan.

Speicher would not like to see his role in life described as a participant in a war. The corporate entity of United Air Lines sees its relationship to its public as a cooperative arrangement in which industrial responsibility complements public needs.

Thus would William Speicher describe his function. And so it would be if it weren't for the fact that the consumer/customer movement is rising up angry and their targets are the corporate giants whose emblems are most often seen. And if you are angry at airplanes, chances are sooner or later you will be angry at United.

SPEICHER'S temperament seems fitted to his present lot in life. He describes his job as one of helping the public to understand the ways of the airline industry. He says his company is interested enough in the whole question of consumer rights to establish a department of consumer relations. He and his staff of 33 deal with irate citizens' groups as well as every day queries about lost luggage and faulty service.

The department would not be out of place in virtually any corporation of comparable size except for the peculiarities on the effects of airplanes on the common environment.

Speicher says the biggest gripe people have about the airplane is the noise it generates. He lists Los Angeles first in the depth of organized opposition to excessive overflights. Further down the list is Boston and still further down is the citizen outcry around O'Hare.

"A lot of people living near O'Hare are honest in their concerns over noise levels," Speicher said.

"I think the airlines have generally responded well to the problem, but of course there are further developments in the works which may help reduce the unique noise properties of jet engines," Speicher said. United is involved in a research project with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration which is seeking answers to noise problems.

Perhaps another more immediate answer is the hotly debated "two-step" approach for aircraft landings. The "two-step" involves a pilot bringing his craft in high, then achieving a high rate of descent and making the last few miles to the airfield very low. The effect is to keep the noise inside a smaller area, and to make the highest noise levels occur above airport property.

UNITED HAS NOT adopted that approach because the line says the safety aspects are not yet well enough defined and more electronic assistance is needed for the pilot to make the maneuver safely.

Some smaller airlines, notably PSA of California, have announced the use of the "two-step" approach, although they limit it to favorable weather conditions.

Long range solutions, according to Speicher, really can only be found in intelligent and foresighted land use policies which, he feels, must come from the federal level.

The type of bill the airlines are interested in promoting is the kind put forward by Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington. Jackson's bill would give states the overriding power to achieve land use planning if local governments do not act.

Although Speicher's job is to speak for the side of the airlines, and especially United, there is an area where most experts agree the lines are vulnerable. Speicher admits it, too:

"Excessive flights in and out of particular cities is a tough question for airlines to handle. Passengers see a plane with only a handful of people aboard and then another flight going to the same city in a half-hour and they begin to wonder about it."

"I think as long as the airline industry is a privately owned enterprise with motives of profit and customer service, there will be problems with excessive flight. United has tried to cut some of that down. There were some 1,825 per day in 1970 for United and there are about 1,635 a day now," Speicher said, although not many major metropolitan airports are receiving reduced volumes of traffic.

Speicher said when he left the University of Maryland with a degree in transportation management he wanted to do something for his field. He spent six years in the Air Force as a jet pilot and then, frustrated with the bureaucracy, left for private industry.

HE WOULD HAVE been a major by jets in the azure sky. When he left the Air Force he almost became a civilian jet pilot, but chose instead to go into United's management training program. On the wall in front of him is a color picture of the type of lethal weapon of war he used to pilot. Behind him, and closer to the touch is a row of books dealing with corporate and executive functions.

And somewhere a man's suitcase is boarding the wrong plane, somewhere jets are coming in low over housing developments, somewhere dissident and angry voices are criticizing the use — and abuse — of Bill Speicher's sky.

The Doctor Says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — I keep getting attacks from the gut and it usually hits my ankles. I've been going to a doctor about a year or longer and he gives me some pills to take when it occurs. I'm 50 years old and it started about five years ago. I need to know what I can eat and drink. Sometimes I get it when I've been drinking and other times I get it even if I haven't had anything to drink. I don't have a regular doctor now since he moved out of the state. Could you please help me? I need it very much.

Dear Reader — Yes, I can help you. Get yourself a new doctor as soon as possible. You'll need regular supervision. While dietary control helps a little bit in some people with gout, individuals who have recurring attacks should be taking medicine since even the strictest dietary control doesn't accomplish enough.

Individuals who have attacks of gouty arthritis need medicine all the time and not just for the attacks. The idea is to take medicines regularly to prevent the attacks in the first place.

You also need to take medicine to prevent the later development of gouty arthritis, which is not like the acute attacks, but which can cause deformity of the joints. Without medicine there may be a slow accumulation of deposits in the joints that causes chronic gouty arthritis. Alcohol and dietary binges often precipitate an acute attack as do emotional factors and some other aspects of living, but prevention of these attacks doesn't obviate the point that you need to be taking medicine regularly and this means that you need a doctor.

Dear Dr. Lamb — I would like to know if it is necessary for a woman 63 years old who has had a hysterectomy and has been a widow for seven years to have a Pap smear very year. (Only the womb is out.) I have had four children and have been retired one year.

Dear Reader if your doctor who has been giving you your examinations thinks so, I believe you should continue to do so. There are different ways of doing a hysterectomy and it's not clear what you mean by having only the womb out. Actually the complete uterus consists of the body of the uterus and the cervix. For an analogy, you can think of it like a fruit jar. The body of the uterus is the main part of the jar and the rim of the jar where the lid is screwed on represents the cervix. Sometimes when a hysterectomy is done, only the body of the uterus is removed and the cervix is left in. In this case, a woman can still develop cancer of the cervix and a regular examination with a Pap smear is indicated. In other instances the entire uterus is taken out, including the cervix. In these instances a woman is most unlikely to develop a cancer. Theoretically, she might develop one of the vaginal wall but these are relatively rare.

Xerox Promises NEC Computer To Be Repaired

Five Xerox Corp. officials promised the governing board of the Northwest Educational Cooperative (NEC) Saturday they will get NEC's new computer running — and that they will do it quickly.

The five, ranging from the assistant manager of the Midwest region to the area service manager, explained they plan to install new parts in the Sigma 6E computer later this week. They said the repair should solve NEC's problems.

Even after receiving that assurance, however, governing board members agreed to seek bids on a new computer system so they will be able to switch to a new company Nov. 4 if the Xerox computer is not working.

The computer was delivered this summer and is supposed to serve the eight school districts in the NEC data processing co-op.

However, Gloria Kinney, NEC executive director, said "There have been repeated operational problems with the machine and we've faced a crisis situation not once, but many times in trying to meet our users basic needs."

DATA PROCESSING director John has a backlog of 60 hours of work promised to school districts. In addition, he said, one deadline, for the payroll for High School Dist. 214, was missed by several hours.

Governing board member Lori Sarnar, representative of Prospect Heights Dist. 23, said Dist. 23 has had many problems with lack of service. "The situation as far as we're concerned is intolerable," she said.

Richard Schlott, governing board president added, "If the data processing coop falls it won't matter whose fault it is. It could end a larger part of the services of NEC."

William Walker, assistant manager for the Midwest region for Xerox, told the board the company understands the importance of the computer operation to NEC.

"We have not been pleased with the way the system has performed," he said. "It has been less than even marginally satisfactory for us. You'll find us a little dumbfounded because this isn't the way we are used to seeing our equipment operate."

Walker said the service manager he believes he has finally located the source of the problem and will replace the disc drives on the machine with the first parts which come off the Xerox assembly line in California.

IN ADDITION, the officials promised to make their own computer in downtown Chicago available to NEC both while the computer is being repaired and after it is fixed to help with backlog.

The governing board agreed to seek bids this month for a new computer system. At a special board meeting Nov. 4 they will decide whether to reject all bids or to buy a new system, Schlott said.

"By going out for bids we aren't saying we've decided to get rid of Xerox," Schlott added, "but we have to have some alternatives if the computer still fails to work."

The districts using the NEC data processing co-op are Dist. 214, 15, 21, 23, 26, 54, 57, and 59.

Some Issues Still To Be Clarified

Teachers, Board Draw Up Contract

Representatives of the High School Dist. 214 administration and teachers met yesterday to draw up wording on parts of the 1972-73 salary contract in preparation for a vote by the teachers this week.

The two sides were drawing up contract language for those issues they are agreed upon ... and clarifying issues — all dealing with money — that they still have not agreed on.

Richard Chierice, chairman of the negotiations team for the Dist. 214 Education Association, said association officials will meet with teachers in the seven high schools Thursday to explain the issues in the contract dispute.

On Friday, he said, the teachers will be asked to vote on whether to accept the last offer presented by the board's negotiating team, and will also be able to express their opinions on the recommended settlement presented by a professional fact-finder and on the association's last offer.

Supt. Edward Gilbert said yesterday he did not know whether the full school board will meet prior to the teachers vote to endorse the offer made by the association. Under terms of the negotiations procedure, the full board will at some point have to act officially on the fact-finders report.

Neither the teachers nor the board has yet made public the precise terms of the various offers being discussed. On Sunday, they did say, however, that one of the issues is whether to tie all salaries in a precise percentage to the base pay.

Chierice said once the teachers have voted on the final offers the two sides will make public their positions as required by their negotiations procedure.

Observers Now Believe McGovern Can Carry Illinois

by BOB LAHEY
A News Analyst

Can George McGovern carry Illinois?
Yes.

Those who predict that he WILL remain as scarce as Coolidge campaign buttons. But the numbers of those who now believe it possible are growing.

Both Republican and Democratic sources are drawing back from predictions of an overwhelming landslide for President Nixon, especially in Illinois.

A veteran Republican who has been watching Illinois elections for four decades, and McGovern's Illinois campaign manager — in recent conversations with the Herald — gave strikingly similar assessments of the 1972 presidential campaign.

Among the conclusions which each put forth:

—The American public was disposed to vote against Richard M. Nixon at the time of the Democratic National Convention.

—But, early mistakes in the McGovern campaign prevented him from appearing as a palatable alternative.

—McGovern's campaign has finally coughed into high gear and he is steadily grinding away at Nixon's lead.

—The polls which continue to show Nixon a runaway should neither reassure Republicans nor dismay Democrats.

THOSE VIEWS ARE shared by Harold Rainville, for more than 20 years the chief aide and political adviser to the late Sen. Everett M. Dirksen; and Lt. Gov. Paul Simon, who heads the McGovern campaign effort in Illinois.

Rainville disdains the polls, declaring that they are of use only if you understand their weaknesses, which he feels hardly any voters, and few political observers, do.

The polls, he explains, purport to represent trends among 100 per cent of the eligible voters. But, he points out, seldom do more than 80 per cent of those voters register. And seldom do more than 75 per cent of those registered actually go to the polls.

A little arithmetic shows then that the outcome of the election depends on probably not more than 60 per cent of the total electorate. The significant figure in a poll, then, is not 51 per cent, but 31 per cent. "Anytime your opponent shows more than 30 per cent, you have to figure he's in the running — depending on who's lying," said Rainville.

He and Simon also agree that the most significant figure in current polls is the tremendously high "undecided" vote. With polls showing as many as 35 or 45 per cent undecided, they bear out the assessment of the two men that voters are not strongly for either candidate, and the outcome could be decided in the final days or hours of the campaign.

RAINVILLE POINTS OUT that Nixon carried Illinois by only 130,000 votes in 1968 (while Dirksen's margin was 350,000). With nearly 1½ million new voters going to the polls, the youth vote could wipe out that margin by going two-to-one for McGovern, again figuring on only 60 per cent of the voting.

And despite the polls, in a state still nearly evenly split between Republicans and Democrats, Rainville asks, "How many Democrats — who aren't mad at the local ticket — will really vote for Nixon?"

Again, Simon agrees with Rainville on the youth vote, despite polls showing Nixon in the lead among new voters. "It's just the feeling you get on campuses," said Simon, "that McGovern runs way ahead."

More clear, concedes Simon, is the fact that if this were election day, "we would lose." But, he adds, "It is equally clear that we are gaining."

He compares the current campaign to 1968, when Hubert Humphrey started equally as far back as McGovern, but closed to 7/10ths of 1 per cent by election day.

It is the same kind of campaign, he said, in which no single issue has caught the attention of the voter, and "the only strategy" has been to register voters, canvass precincts, and get out the vote.

DESPITE THEIR weaknesses, polls are still used by political strategists themselves, and Simon says McGovern's studies in Illinois show "a steady erosion of Nixon strength and a steady gain by McGovern."

He makes no claim that the polls — 50

Paul H. Simon

phone calls in half a dozen counties each week — are in the least scientific. "But they give us a gauge of our own, and the most striking thing about them has been steady increases for McGovern."

But in the end, both Rainville and Simon return to the premise that people will vote against Richard Nixon if George McGovern gives them a reason to do so.

"The Eagleton affair has been the biggest single thing which has interfered," said Simon. The removal of Missouri

Sen. Thomas Eagleton as candidate for vice president remains the chief topic of discussion among voters whom he encounters. But Simon, who was among those who urged Eagleton's retention, also concedes that Eagleton himself might have been the single issue of the campaign, had he been retained.

Simon says he is dismayed, but not surprised, that issues such as the Watergate and ITT scandals have not enflamed the voters. "The average guy just doesn't identify with them," he observed.

But because there are no clear-cut issues ("An issue only exists if it affects everyone," says Rainville.) of any magnitude, the two political veterans agree the election remains balanced on the precarious question of "who they decide they like."

THAT, CONCLUDES Rainville, is why Nixon's advisers are keeping him in a low profile — McGovern calls it "hiding" — in the White House.

Carson Extortion Suspect Once Arrested In Area

A California man charged by Los Angeles police with trying to extort money from television personality Johnny Carson had been arrested in Des Plaines on April 11 for a $20,000 armed robbery.

Richard Dziabacinski, 26 of Sun Valley, Calif. was apprehended by Los Angeles police Friday night along with two accomplices after allegedly picking up the extortion money in a Van Nuys, Calif. parking lot.

Dziabacinski was arrested by Cook County Sheriff's police April 11 after he lured several youths to an apartment at 9273 Fairway Dr., Des Plaines, with an offer to sell the group 150 pounds of marijuana for $19,750.

According to Sgt. Clyde Abney, the arresting officer, when the young people arrived at the Fairway Dr. address Dziabacinski pulled a gun on the youths, took the money and pretended to kidnap a 19-year-old female accomplice who had been waiting at the apartment with Dziabacinski and the girl later turned reportedly lived in the apartment.

AFTER DZIABACINSKI and the girl escaped DiPietro and the youths notified Cook County Sheriff's police.

Dziabacinski and the girl later turned themselves into police and denied being part of the elaborate holdup scheme. DiPietro earlier reportedly admitted being part of the robbery and implicated Dziabacinski and the girl, who were identified by the youths after turning themselves in, according to reports.

The ten youths were subsequently charged with conspiracy to buy marijuana.

Both the armed robbery charges against Dziabacinski and his two alleged accomplices and the conspiracy charges against the 10 youths who had planned to buy the marijuana were dropped in June because none of the participants would testify against one another.

Police indicated at the time of the robbery that Dziabacinski and his accomplice never had 150 pounds of marijuana to sell the 10 youths. The cash was not recovered.

IT WAS HARD to tell the plumbers and electricians from the doctors last Friday at Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights. Karl Falkstrom and others had to dress in the traditional surgical garb as they went into the new surgical wing with checklists to make final repairs. The two week old wing has 10 operating rooms and an 18 bed recovery room. It was built at a cost of $88 per square foot.

Flynn Charges Nimrod Ordered Files Break-In

Tom Flynn Democratic candidate for the Fourth District Senate seat, charged yesterday that his opponent John Nimrod ordered a county building department employee to break into the files of George Dunne, then a county commissioner.

Flynn said the breakins occurred in 1966. Dunne is currently Cook County Board president.

At a press conference yesterday Flynn announced he was turning over to the Illinois state's attorney's office certain correspondence concerning the alleged breakins.

Flynn said he received the information from John Lamb, a former security officer in the custodian's office. Nimrod formerly served as chief custodian in that department.

Flynn said he decided to make the pending state's attorney's investigation public because "I consider that Mr. Nimrod has driven me past the line of integrity."

FLYNN DISPLAYED A letter in which Lamb had charged that Nimrod and other associates had performed "numerous illegal acts." He alleges that at the verbal order of Nimrod, "he and others entered the office of County Commissioner George Dunne, rifled files, and took personal and governmental material," Flynn said. The letter containing the charges was addressed to Joseph Woods, former Cook County sheriff.

During the press conference, Flynn also exhibited letters Lamb had written to Gov. Richard Ogilvie, Sen. Adlai Stevenson and the U.S. Dept. of Justice informing them of the alleged breakin. Flynn said Lamb received no reply from Ogilvie's office. However, in a reply to Lamb, Sen. Stevenson stated that a member of his staff had spoken with Christopher Cohen in Dunne's office and "he is fully aware of the circumstances which you set forth in your letter to Mr. Woods," Stevenson said.

Win At Bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

If you can keep from looking at East and West cards, do so. You are in six spades in a match point duplicate game. Don't worry about how you got there. Jeff Rubens doesn't give any bidding in his book and we aren't going to give any here.

Some slams that should be bid when all cards are seen are almost impossible to bid at the table and this is one of them. North and South only have 27 high-card points and neither player has a singleton or a six-card suit.

Anyway, there you are in six and a heart is opened. You win in dummy and lead the three of spades. East plays the deuce.

At this point you have a sure-thing play for your contract if you play a low trump. That is, it is sure unless West wins the trick with a singleton jack or king and gives his partner a ruff. This can happen, but it is so unlikely that you don't consider it.

Rubens says to play the low trump and he is eminently correct. This play costs you an overtrick if West holds the singleton king of spades but it saves your contract if East holds the king and jack of spades in addition to the deuce he has already played.

The chance of a singleton king is greater but you are in such a good contract that you want to apply the rubber bridge principle of safety.

3rd District House Candidates

Donald L. Totten

Donald L. Totten:

'Avoid Control By Government'

by NANCY COWGER

Services to the public are most desirable when provided by private enterprise, less so by local government, and least from state and federal governmental units.

This is the base of Donald Totten's philosophy in his candidacy for the state legislature. Running in the 3rd District, Republican Totten stresses decentralization when he talks about governmental responsibilities. Government functions, he believes, should be performed at the lowest level possible — for maximal citizen control and minimal administrative costs.

Transportation and housing are areas which demonstrate Totten's ideals.

AS ASSISTANT director for the northern division of the state highway department, Totten does not favor one section of the state paying for tollroads in another. As soon as the construction bonds which financed a given road are paid, said Totten, the tolls should be reduced to a level sufficient only to pay maintenance costs. Instead, the tolls are kept at the same level, and revenues are used to construct tollroads elsewhere.

He believes government should stay out of the housing industry, and opposes U.S. subsidies.

He believes public transportation, such as bus and train service, is a responsibility of private business, but Totten sees an inability of such service companies to operate at a profit.

"There are really no privately owned bus systems in the Chicago area really making a go of it," said Totten, citing lack of ridership as the reason. The companies could be supported artificially — by federal subsidies or by encouraging use of them through penalizing use of cars.

"I'm not sure (federal subsidies) are the answer, when you look at the Chicago Transit Authority," said Totten.

AND TOTTEN questions whether penalties for private auto use would encourage enough ridership of bus lines to make a difference in their revenues. One means he said could be considered is a toll for using the Kennedy Expressway between O'Hare Airport and Chicago's Loop.

Government should stay out of the housing industry, believes Totten, and permit the economy to determine when and where low-cost housing units should be built. He opposes federal subsidies for suburban low-cost housing, including units for the elderly.

"If there is a need or demand, I'm sure it could be built by private developers. I would hope they would explore that (private funding) to the nth degree before they go to federal subsidies," said Totten.

While many legislative candidates are citing a trend toward a full-time state legislature, Totten instead favors legislative reforms to "eliminate the hysteria of the last month" the legislature is in session.

Too many bills are held to the end of the session, which Totten considers "dangerous and not in the welfare of the people of the state."

WHILE TOTTEN does not approve extending the legislative year, he does favor raising legislators' salaries. "If we are going to attract top-flight people to the legislature, we are going to have to pay proportionately," he said, recommending an annual 4 per cent increase in salaries plus per diem expense payments and funding for office personnel. Totten does not approve "double-dipping," or legislators holding second public jobs, but sees no reason to bar the representatives from holding second private jobs.

Gubernatorial candidates this year are suggesting they will approve no new taxes within the next few years, if elected. But Totten said it will be very difficult to hold the line on taxes, if the public continues to demand increasing governmental services. These demands are surfacing in the areas of physical and mental health care and facilities, schools and welfare, he said.

He does not expect to vote for increases in taxes, but said he may consider alternative taxes.

And Totten predicts the state will have to look for an alternative to real estate taxes. Cases pending before the U.S. Supreme Court could make that form of taxation illegal for financing education, and Totten suggests such a decision would also apply to other areas of government spending.

IF THIS HAPPENS, said Totten, property owners would pay no real estate taxes at all. The state could move toward doubling income tax, "the only equitable" alternate source of revenue, said Totten.

The Illinois legislature has considered a number of proposals to regulate negotiations between public employees and their employers, such as the education field. Some other states have such laws. Totten opposes them, saying "negotiations are a matter between the school board and teachers." He also disavows the right of public employees to strike, saying "no one forced them into the employment they sought — if they feel salaries and conditions are inadequate they should seek employment somewhere else."

Terming flooding "a priority issue," Totten urges municipal leaders to "get their houses in order and apply for federal flood insurance."

While this would help cut down losses from flooding, Totten espouses another method of lessening the danger of floods, projects similar to the Salt Creek Watershed Program. Cooperation between the state, the Metropolitan Sanitary District and municipalities will be required to enact such ideas, he said, and the district has the "muscle" to force cooperation if municipalities prove reluctant.

A measure Totten strongly opposes is the Equal Rights Amendment, now awaiting ratification from the states, and espoused by women's rights organizations.

"I do not think rights are a matter to be legislated. There's just as much right to discriminate against persons as not to be discriminated against," said Totten, adding that those who discriminate will some day answer to a Supreme Being.

Virginia Macdonald:

Takes Cautious Approach To Issues

by KURT BAER

Virginia Macdonald, 3rd District Republican, admits she takes a cautious approach to many issues. "I guess it's just my nature," she said.

That doesn't mean that, if elected to the Illinois House, she plans to ignore issues like education, tax reform, abortion, pollution, mass transportation and redistricting.

"She says she just want to take a close look at these and other problems before endorsing specific action."

She says she just wants to take a close look at these and other problems before endorsing specific action.

Mrs. Macdonald, who bested Donald Totten and Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland Meyer in the March primary, said that her campaign has found that many voters are still confused over recent redistricting.

"I'm doing a lot of door-to-door campaigning and making personal appearances and everywhere I find there's still confusion over the new boundaries," she added.

To help remedy the redistricting problem, Mrs. Macdonald said she would support a redrawn map which might reunite all or most of Arlington Heights in a single district.

"I think it's ridiculous to have Arlington Heights carved up into three different districts," she commented. But at the same time she knows it is not politically realistic to expect legislators who have just been elected in a new district to remap their constituency.

IF SHE WINS in November, Mrs. Macdonald will be serving her first term as a state representative. But her trip to Springfield would by no means be a maiden voyage.

As an Arlington Heights delegate to the 1970 Illinois Constitutional Convention in Springfield, Mrs. Macdonald was the only woman to serve on Con Con's Bill of Rights committee.

"I will support the woman's equal rights amendment. It's something I do believe in. But I think it's too bad we have to resort to a constitutional amendment to achieve it," she said.

"I haven't been in the forefront of the woman's liberation movement. But I do support equal pay for equal time and equal opportunity for all citizens."

Mrs. Macdonald said she does not favor any radical change in Illinois abortion law but would support carefully worded amendments that would permit abortion for therapeutic reasons.

"I'm personally opposed to abortion on demand. To be practical instead of emotional, I think we should take action where the need is the greatest, in cases of rape, incest and prenatal mental illness," she said.

SHE ADDS that both theologians and doctors would have to be consulted to determine the time limits on a therapeutic abortion. "I certainly would want it to be early in pregnancy," she said.

Ultimately, Mrs. Macdonald thinks a popular referendum would be the best solution to the abortion controversy. "We have battled this in the federal Congress, in the state assemblies and I really would like to see it put as a referendum to the people."

On the parochial question, Mrs. Macdonald said she thinks some kind of state aid is probably inevitable but again voices a conservative note.

"I recognize the need for aid to non-public schools but I also know the financial problems of public school systems so that I still feel I'd have to be very cautious about the constitutionality of parochial," she said.

Mrs. Macdonald said she foresees state-wide funding of education in Illinois but cautions against a false belief that the real estate property tax will be wholly abolished.

"Many people feel the real estate property tax is going to be abolished. That just isn't going to happen," she said.

ON THE SUBJECT of mass transportation, candidate Macdonald said she favors creation of a suburban area mass transit authority but believes that the Chicago Transit Authority is "Chicago's problem."

"I'm not sure it's fair to say mass transportation can't have state subsidy," she said, adding, however, that she is opposed to using earmarked Motor Fuel Tax dollars for mass transit needs.

Mrs. Macdonald said that in her campaigning throughout the 3rd District, she has found flooding problems to be the number one issue in voters' minds this fall.

"Time has come for an end to all the studies. We know what the problems are by now and people are expecting some action," she said.

Mrs. Macdonald is running with the support of Wheeling Township's regular Republican organization. Arlington Heights Village Pres. John Woods is managing her campaign and former Village Pres. Jack Walsh is also working in her behalf as is Wheeling Township Committeewoman Veva Meyer.

Not surprisingly, Mrs. Macdonald said she does not support the position taken by the League of Women Voters to abolish township government in Illinois.

"Where we have a unit of government set up and no clear alternative, it is premature at the very least to abolish township government."

"And I think it would result in an increased cost to the taxpayer."

She wants to take a close look at problems before endorsing any specific action.

Herald's Panel Interviews GOP

Candidates for the Illinois House of Representatives from the 3rd legislative district are interviewed in today's edition of the Herald's election preview.

The two candidates — Don Totten of Schaumburg and Virginia Macdonald of Arlington Heights — are both Republicans seeking a two year term in Springfield. Both candidates are running for the 3rd Illinois House for the first time. The third district is similar to most other suburban districts in that it has new boundaries this year, although portions of the old 3rd form a good share of the new district.

Both candidates appeared before the Herald's panel of reporters and editors for the interviews presented here.

Patsy Piper Puts Skills To Work For Community

by BILLIE BACHHUBER

Patsy Piper could very well pick that proverbial peck of pickled peppers. Busy Pat likes to garden and especially enjoys gourmet cooking.

But these favorite pursuits take only a small amount of Mrs. Jack Piper's well organized life. Once employed by Time, Inc. for more than 12 years, Pat now is a Mount Prospect homemaker and mother of two, Scott, 13, and Deldre, 11. Though homemaking responsibilities come first, she continues to use her secretarial and bookkeeping skills in volunteer and community activities.

"My husband approves and lets me do anything I want to do as long as our home and family come first," she commented with good humor.

Pat chooses to do plenty . . . both at home and in the community. So much, in fact, she keeps a calendar-list and checks off jobs in order of importance.

AT PRESENT Pat puts most outside the home efforts into Mount Prospect's Community Action Plan (CAP). She's CAP's secretary-treasurer. Volunteering her career skills one to two hours daily, she compiles financial and other reports, runs errands for the Ice House and Pump House (community social services), visits the village hall on CAP business, prepares and mails out notices, and performs other clerical duties.

The purpose of CAP, Pat explained, is to establish communication with the public. Social services for citizens are the most important function, and CAP offers free listening for the troubled and/or referral counseling is available to all for the asking.

Right now volunteers are needed for the Hot Line, a telephone "listening" service. Anyone 18 or over willing to volunteer may call 258-7184. Volunteers must undergo training, Mrs. Piper advised. Of the young volunteers who give their time, Pat says, "These kids are wonderful. One thing I've learned from them is you can't judge kids by how they look."

PATSY PIPER first attended CAP's organizational meetings as president of the Mount Prospect's Junior Women's Club. She has held many offices in the Juniors, including secretary-treasurer for four years, during the 16 years she has been involved in the club.

Pat volunteered to coordinate nine women's groups within CAP at the beginning, and accepted their first assignment: community education. Later when asked to temporarily fill in when the CAP secretary-treasurer retired, she agreed, and subsequently was appointed to permanent status.

Now concentrating on this job, Pat admits she likes detail work and handling money best. She's also treasurer for the 7th District Junior Women's Club for the second year. All the money in the district passes through Pat's hands.

"I keep so busy handling other people's money, I can't find time to spend my husband's money!" she joked. And in order to keep her own household budget straight, she confesses she has to "burn the midnight oil."

HOWEVER, PATSY thinks she rarely has too much to do. Cookie chairman for her daughter's Girl Scout troop, judge for Paddock's Junior Miss Contest, room mother for her children's classes and Sunday School attendance recorder at South Church, Community Baptist, Mount Prospect. Or home decorator ("I decide what we are going to do and Jack does it!"), winner in sewing contests (she's taken tailoring and lingerie making courses), art enthusiast and gourmet cook, Patsy Piper tackles all with equal enthusiasm.

But since last June Mrs. Piper has eased up on gourmet cooking. She now reserves this favorite endeavor for Sundays or when company comes. Showing off her slim, new figure, Pat explained that with her husband's encouragement, she joined Weight Watchers last June and in just four months shed 31 pounds.

With her will power and Jack's determination to "keep her in line," she means to keep it off.

"Jack doesn't like fat women!" she said with a good natured shrug.

NOT ONE TO WASTE time nor let her secretarial skills lapse, Mrs. Patsy Piper devotes from one to two hours each day to her job as secretary-treasurer of Mount Prospect's Community Action Plan. She's also active in Mount Prospect Junior Women's Club and gives time to Girl Scouts and as room mother.

Dear Dorothy: When a recipe calls for scalded milk, I inevitably end up scorching it and feel like an idiot. What's the trick to this simple cooking stunt? —Shirley Monroe.

Don't be embarrassed. This may be the most delicate and trickiest of all the cooking arts. The timing is so precise that the least slip can result in the albumin (milk protein) sticking to the bottom and sides of the pan — and, moreover, you can get scorching when the fire is a fraction too high.

An old-time trick is to take the pan in which the milk is to be scalded and rinse it with ice-cold water before pouring in the milk. Then keep stirring. It's scalded if you see even the first tiny bubble. You go by the steam and an alertness that tells you you are about to get a bubble. Take it off the heat instantly. You can still use it with a touch of scorch. You can scald milk without any trouble in a double boiler but it takes three times as long. When through, soak the pan in cold water.

Dear Dorothy: Worms have built tents in one of our trees. A neighbor said you knew how to get rid of them. —Vivian C.

Only way I know is to burn them — tying newspapers on a long green branch (with a wire tie) and raising it to the tent. Best thing is to wait until twilight when most of the things are in their nests. Sometimes you have to use a ladder and cut branches down because you can't reach them with the improvised flame thrower. It isn't fun, but it's the only way to kill them.

Dear Dorothy: Have always been grateful for the hint in your column which suggested using rug shampoo for stains in our cottons. It usually works diluted with a little water, but if the stain is stubborn, full-strength rug shampoo invariably does the job. —Ann B.

The blood will be collected Saturday and Sunday at Wheeling High School.

The spooky characters in town that evening will be the children of Wheeling Jaycee Jills holding a Halloween party at Jack London Junior High School. The kids will also be parading through Adolorata Villa Retirement Home.

The blood drive, sponsored by the Jaycees and Jills, and the Halloween party will be the main topics of discussion at tonight's meeting of the Jills in the Hartmann House.

Heather Holman

Carol Lynn Margarites

Jean Louise Turcotte

An August 1973 wedding is planned by Heather Joy Holman and Steven Charles Dupre, son of George T. Dupre, 417 S. Elm, Palatine, and the late Mrs. Dupre. Announcing the couple's engagement and approaching marriage are Heather's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James R. Holman, 1896 Appleby Road, Inverness.

Both young people are graduates of Fremd High School and both are now juniors at the University of Illinois at Champaign.

Park Ridge residents Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Margarites are announcing the engagement of their daughter Carol Lynn to Gary E. Grenlie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald E. Grenlie, 2403 George St., Rolling Meadows. The couple plans a July 14 wedding.

Carol, a '72 graduate of Maine South High School, is employed with Jewel Companies Inc. Her fiancé, a '65 graduate of Forest View and a '69 graduate of Western Michigan University, served two years in the Army. He has just recently returned from a tour of duty in Vietnam.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Turcotte, Rolling Meadows, announce the engagement of their daughter Jean Louise to Thomas Harold Javens, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Javens, Rochester, Pa. A spring '73 wedding is planned.

4 Area Agents Offer 'See And Go'

You Can 'Take Your Trip' In Advance

Four travel agents in the northwest suburbs are now prepared to "take you there before you go."

Vacation-minded suburbanites can walk into Roberta Fisher Travel, Arlington Heights; Des Plaines Travel, Des Plaines; Around the World Travel, Inc., Palatine; and Paradise Tours, Randhurst, and see their travel destinations in living color via a cassette videotape system.

Called See and Go Travel Service, the dramatic new selling tool may revolutionize the whole travel industry, says Mrs. Roberta Fisher of the Arlington Heights travel agency at 120 W. Eastman.

"I think it's the greatest thing that's ever hit the travel business. A person in the mood to travel can now take an actual look at a country and see what it's like — what kind of hotels he'll be staying in — what kind of sightseeing he'll have — and what sort of restaurants he'll be dining in," Mrs. Fisher continued.

Bob Howey, vice-president and general manager of Around the World Travel, Inc., Palatine, first travel agent in the country to sign up for See and Go, says: "It's one thing to tell a person about a country or a tour — but when you can actually show it with action, sound and color, people can see for themselves."

Mrs. Nancy Graham, manager of Des Plaines Travel Agency, points out: "This is not like a travelogue or travel film. See and Go videotape cassettes are fast-paced and present in five or ten minutes all the vital information a traveler needs to know."

Remark that travel brochures don't always give the complete story, Mrs. Audrey Raasch, manager of Paradise Tours, Randhurst, thinks See and Go shows all the glamour and adventure of travel but gives the practical information needed too.

"People can see what they're getting for their travel dollars before they decide on a trip," she added.

At present the four northwest suburban travel agents have See and Go programs available on tours of the Orient; a visit to Ireland, Scotland and Scandinavia; a grand tour of Europe; and Olson's World's Wonder Luxury Air Cruise.

More programs being planned include features on Florida, Hawaii, the Bahamas, the Caribbean, Mexico and the Gulf Coast.

More northwest suburban travel agents will soon be using the See and Go travel service, a nationwide videotape network.

SEE AND GO — Four travel agents in the northwest suburbs are now prepared to "take you there before you go" — via a cassette videotape system that allows persons to see their travel destinations in full color TV in the travel agent's office.

See Olson Air Cruise On TV

by CLARE WRIGHT

Like your travel dreams in color? Now you can see Olson's World's Wonder Luxury Air Cruise on color TV in your travel agent's office.

Thanks to a dramatic new device called See and Go Travel Service — now available at four northwest suburban travel agencies — you can get a first-hand look at the plushiest tour your travel agent can come up with.

Departing from New York next Jan. 28, this most exclusive of tours will circle the globe in 35 "never-to-be-forgotten, fun-filled, glorious and carefree days" on Olson's "President Special" — a specially appointed Pan Am Boeing 707 Intercontinental Jet.

"IT'S ALL THE wonderful places you've always dreamed about, but never thought you'd get to," says Mrs. Roberta Fisher, who invites Arlington Heights travelers (and travel dreamers) to preview the push tour on the See and Go video cassette player at her agency at 120 W. Eastman.

Bob Howey, vice president of Around the World Travel, Inc., 100 Palatine Rd., Palatine, says that anyone coming into their agency to look at the Olson's World's Wonder Luxury Air Cruise via See and Go will get a good look at all the features of this push annual tour now in its seventh year.

The Palatine agency, incidentally, was the first in the nation to install a See and Go videotape cassette player.

Says Mrs. Nancy Graham, manager of Des Plaines Travel Agency, "The Olson luxury air cruise is planned for people who are looking for something 'very special' in luxurious travel."

When we were in downtown Des Plaines the other day we stopped in at the Des Plaines Travel office at 1525 Elmwood and had a preview peek at the glamorous Olson World's Wonder Luxury Air Cruise on the agency's brand new See and Go machine. What an experience that was. It's like being there before you go.

After viewing the ten-minute color cassette tape we knew all the fantastic things we'd see and do on this unique globe-circling tour personally planned by Harvey S. Olson.

"WITH SUCH AN unusual tour like Olson's World's Wonder Air Cruise, there's so much to show and explain to a traveler. Brochures, photos, slides or movies can't tell the complete story," says Mrs. Audrey Raasch, of Paradise Tours, in Randhurst Shopping Center.

If you're in Randhurst we suggest you drop in at Paradise Tours — and "take a trip around the world" via See and Go.

See the lavish entertainment provided on this fantastic Olson tour — a gala dinner party in New Delhi with distinguished local dignitaries, including noted maharajas — a private garden performance of the famous Thai dancers — a visit to famous Palaces — and other special features.

The unusual air cruise first visits Morocco and the mysterious cities of Marrakech, Rabat and Casablanca. The plush safari then moves on through the Dark Continent to Nairobi National Park, the Mt. Kenya Safari Club, and northward to Ethiopia. Next on the global itinerary Bermuda's Dollar Same Value As U.S.

HAMILTON, BERMUDA — The Bermuda government has cut the relationship of its currency with the pound sterling and decided to tie the value of the Bermuda dollar to that of the United States dollar.

Although it still is unclear what, if any, effect the decision will have on prices paid in the colony by American visitors, Americans will, for the first time since Aug. 16, 1971 find their dollar on an even par with the Bermudian dollar eliminating bothersome surcharges and differing exchange rates. For all practical purposes, one Bermuda dollar now will equal one U.S. dollar.

The decision was praised by local hoteliers and merchants who said the three to 10 per cent disparity between the two currencies had caused misunderstandings for their American customers in the past.

are the wonders of India where stops are made in New Delhi, Jaipur and Agra. Bangkok, Hong Kong, Singapore, Bali, Australia and New Zealand are other ports of call, with the grand finale in Tahiti and Moorea.

You're heard of trips that are dubbed "once in a lifetime." None of them can even come close to this one — in luxury accommodations, gourmet dining, or lavish entertainment. Plus the comfort and convenience of "private house party" day flights on Pan Am's all first-class jet, designed to carry more than 100, but magnificently reapportioned to serve only 84 passengers on this private plane cruise.

TRAVEL LORE

by Clare Wright,
TRAVEL EDITOR

NEW ORLEANS — As we stepped into the Royal Street antique shop the owner was holding a damp cloth to the brow of a bronze Napoleon. He smiled. Just dusting.

We asked him about legends in the French Quarter antique shops.

"Legends? Why, they're so thick I almost have to shoe them out of the doorway to open up in the morning."

We'd heard about a honeymoon couple who bought a gold locket on Royal Street. When they took it to a jeweler in their home town, so the story goes, he discovered the inscription "From Napoleon to Josephine" and offered them fifty thousand dollars.

"Just a romantic tale," said the antique seller.

"But it's also a fact that a visitor here bought an old Bible in a bookstall and it proved to be over three hundred years old. He presented it to a university."

This antique dealer advises against shopping for "legends and fantasies."

"Consider purchases as investments — expect them to increase in value," he says.

Stroll along Royal Street and count the 40 odd antique shops crammed into a double row nine blocks long, and you'll be certain that New Orleans is an antique center.

If you're planning a trip to New Orleans, we suggest you write to the New Orleans Tourist Commission, 400 Royal Street, for its shopping guide — which includes a listing of the antique shops.

Most antique shops in New Orleans handle French and English pieces which date from George III and Louis XV up to the Victorian period. Currently popular, although not strictly antique: art glass, glass pieces made in New England at the end of the nineteenth century.

After a morning of antique browsing we stopped for lunch at Tortorici's — the oldest restaurant in the French Quarter. Our gumbo zehbes was delicious.

There's nothing in the whole world just like the famous New Orleans French Quarter. The area, which goes way back to the Spanish occupation, looks much like it did in the 1700's and 1800's, we were told. Graceful, lacy iron grillwork balconies are ablaze with colorful flower-boxes. A glance down the shady passageways reveals beautiful patios just beyond.

Of course, everybody heads for Jackson Square, heart of the Old French Quarter. Dominating it is a ten-ton statue of Andrew Jackson and his horse. And you'll almost always find the sidewalk artists displaying in the square. Facing the square is magnificent St. Louis Cathedral, flanked by the Cabildo and the Presbytere.

Right alongside the cathedral is Pirates Alley, which also has its quota of sidewalk art shows.

We have some sentimental memories about the Old Absinthe House and never visit New Orleans without popping in there for a little while. Legend says Andrew Jackson rendezvoused here with the pirate Jean Lafitte before the battle of New Orleans.

Then there's Bourbon Street at night! What an experience that is. Amid the wailing din of "dixie," you jostle on the narrow street with other wanderers from all over the world dressed in all manner of garb — from formal to sports attire — from "hippie" clothes to sailor suits. For nine riotous blocks you can stroll on Bourbon street where neon flash and street barkers beckon you inside for "girlie" shows.

One of our favorite spots is tiny Preservation Hall which has authentic jazz and a large collection of jazz memorabilia and illustrations of the jazz greats who helped to popularize the early dixie tunes.

If you make a night of it on Bourbon Street — covering all the famous jazz night clubs — you'll want to greet the pre-dawn hours at the famous "Morning Call." With the spicy aroma of chicory coffee to tickle your nostrils — and the babble of Spanish-French-Creole chatter in your ears — you'll mingle with people in fancy togs and dock stevedores in their working clothes as you drink your cafe au lait served with "beignets," hot, sugar-coated French doughnuts less than 15 minutes old.

The coffee house is in the French Market — once a Choctaw Indian trading post. If you stick around in the morning hours you can watch the vendors selling all kinds of merchandise — vegetables, fruits, souvenirs, baked goods and all kinds of Gulf seafoods. It's a fascinating spot.

If you're still hungry after all this activity and feel in the mood for a big breakfast, head for Brennan's on Royal Street — just a short distance from the Royal Orleans Hotel. Feast on grilled grapefruit, a wide selection of tempting egg dishes — and even crepe suzettes!

If you have time while you're in New Orleans, take a Mississippi riverboat cruise, visit the beautiful Garden District; drive along the shore of Lake Pontchartrain, or watch the longshoremen unload cotton, coffee and other cargo at the busy Port of New Orleans.

Autumn's a good time to consider New Orleans as a vacation spot — and the month of December is fine too.

Write the New Orleans Tourist Commission for a guide to hotels and motels — or check with your travel agent.

A Position In Travel Field Could Change Your Life

Start New Suburban Travel School

A job in the travel business might just change your life!
So says Capt. Olof H. Ohlson, of Wilson

World Travel, Inc., who is launching a brand new suburban travel agents' school, Nov. 7, in the Palatine Plaza,

Palatine, adjacent to his travel agency. "There has long been a need for such a school in the Chicago suburbs," contends

Capt. Ohlson.

"Up until now suburbanites have had to drive all the way into the Loop in order to get the training necessary for exciting careers in travel," he commented.

The new Travel Agents' School of America will prepare persons for positions in travel agencies, tour companies or for independent travel agency management or ownership.

THE CURRICULUM, classroom instruction, field trips and study assignments are designed to cover the most important phases of an authorized travel agency's activities, according to Ohlson.

He added that special emphasis will be placed upon ticketing, itinerary preparation, agency accounting and customer sales contact.

Citing the rapid and continuing expansion of the travel industry, Ohlson points out that the field will need more and more trained men and women in the next few years.

"But no travel agency will hire an untrained person," says Ohlson, who adds that his Travel Agents' School of America will offer its courses to persons with no previous experience or training in the travel business.

"OUR TUITION is sensible too — and we are offering special family rates."

Brochures explaining the new travel school in full descriptive detail may be obtained by calling 359-0480, or 358-3120.

It's Time To Plan Your Ski Trip

It's time to "think snow" and plan your ski fun, says First Arlington International Travel.

Tomorrow evening the travel agency, located in the lobby of the First Arlington National Bank, 1 N. Dunton, will inroduce travelers to two beautiful ski areas, according to Mrs. Rose Marie Friedrich, travel manager.

"Continental Airlines will show a film, 'This Is The Place,' featuring Colorado's wonderful world of skiing — and 'Sky High on Skis' of Swissair will paint a vivid picture of the fabulous Alps," says Mrs. Friedrich.

Preceding the films will be a fashion show featuring the latest in ski clothes by the Aspen Ski and Sport Shop of Arlington Heights.

Don Hassenstein, owner of the ski shop, will present a preview of the newest in ski equipment with a critique on the evolution of skis, boots and ski instruction.

Mrs. Friedrich will also be announcing First Arlington Travel's annual ski holiday to Vail, scheduled for Feb. 3-10.

The price of $259 per person includes air transportation, lodging at the beautiful new Lion Square Lodge based on double occupancy, transfers and lifts.

"This will be a small group with lots of fun planned on the itinerary, so early reservations are suggested," says Mrs. Friedrich.

Representatives of Continental Airlines and Swissair will be on hand to answer questions.

Persons may call 392-3100 for reservations to the ski show.

MINI-CRUISE — A midweek "quickie" cruise to Key West and Nassau on board the M/S Sunward of Norwegian Caribbean Lines was part of a recent Florida vacation for Mr. and Mrs. Harold S. Seligmann of Arlington Heights.

England Is A Friendly Vacation Land

Why do Americans love Britain and go there more than any other European country?

The friendliness of the British, according to a survey taken among visitors last summer by the British Tourist Authority.

A primary reason for coming, 31 per cent said they were most impressed by the "friendly and hospitable people." Thirty per cent listed "places and buildings of historic association" and 23 per cent listed "green and beautiful scenery" as their favorites.

Other interesting facts turned up. They showed that 67 per cent of Americans visiting Britain spent at least four nights in London and 98 per cent touched down there. Approximately a third of American visitors had either been to Scotland or intended to go. A fifth had been to Wales or planned to go there.

In order of popularity after London came Stratford-upon-Avon, Oxford, Windsor, Edinburgh, Bath, Cambridge and Canterbury.

More than 1,550,000 Americans visited Britain last year, and spent an estimated $408,000,000.

More than 40 per cent of American visitors had been to Britain before.

Let's Protect Our History

Too often, it can be said that the Northwest suburbs are an area in which remembrances extend back only to the first house in the subdivision, or to the village official who someone remembers preceded another village official.

We are often without memory of the men and women who farmed and developed this country long before the subdivider and the developer became king, simply because there's no physical evidence.

Indeed, there was a distant past, a past of farmhouses and corner taverns, of the scrapbook-type memories with which we associate rural areas.

The Northwest suburbs was a rich and vigorous area. The men and women lived off the land and survived, much as we today live off the commerce and industry of Chicago.

That often-ignored history received a boost recently when the leaders of Schaumburg, specifically Mayor Bob Atcher, acted to honor the work of the men and women who came before us here.

The Schaumburg Plan Commission agreed on Atcher's plan to study the Old Town area at the intersection of Schaumburg and Roselle Roads, an area where the now-booming community of Schaumburg began.

Indeed, the area around that intersection — where Schaumburg Center was located — is already like an oasis of the past in the middle of the suburban present.

The point of the study would be to develop a plan and ordinances to permit remodeling and to protect buildings which exist in that 40-acre area. Developers have already expressed an interest in working in the area.

It's sad that the Schaumburg move is atypical of the pattern in other communities in the Northwest suburbs. Civic leaders have shown little interest in preserving what little remains of our rural past. The bulldozer is king, and the bulldozer shows no regard for history.

The kind of architecture and the history it represents can easily be compatible with the kind of vigorous development that's going on elsewhere in the Northwest suburbs.

The two complement each other. The people benefit from a well-planned reference point to the past. Any community needs some physical reminders to allow the people to realize there's room for roots.

That's why we commend Schaumburg for its decision to proceed and preserve a bit of history. Recognizing a past is the best way to build a strong foundation for a livable future, we feel.

Outwitting Crime

"The chances that a Cosa Nostra member will be jailed for a crime are still much less than the chances that he will be hurt in an automobile accident."

This is true despite the improved tools and techniques available to police today, says the author of the above quote, Donald R. Cressey, noted criminologist and professor of sociology at the University of California at Santa Barbara.

Not only that, but organized crime is like a machine built with readily replaceable, interchangeable parts, he says. The arrest of one or several individuals won't stop it for very long.

Once bureaucracies of criminals have been established, arrest and prosecution of individuals participating in them is no longer an effective crime control measure. Yet for constitutional reasons related to civil liberties, police must devote most of their energy to dealing with organized criminals as if they were not organized.

Pending solutions to the legal problem of attacking organized crime directly, Cressey suggests flanking maneuvers to undermine the profit basis of organized crime.

For instance, he recommends the legalization of additional forms of gambling to put gambling money into the public treasury rather than into the pockets of crooks; short-term, low-interest loan sources for desperate people; reducing political corruption.

Organization, says Cressey, "not gambling, usury or narcotics distribution or labor racketeering or extortion or murder, is the phenomenon to worry about."

Our Durable Junk

For those who take a "Let George do it" attitude toward crises, there's good news on the environmental front — kind of: Given enough time, nature absorbs even the most durable junk tossed away by man.

According to Dr. Edwin L. Owen of Pennsylvania State University, a specialist in metal corrosion, an aluminum beer can dropped in a forest this summer will probably have broken down into tiny bits of aluminum oxide by the summer of 2472.

Compared to the 500 years for aluminum, the old-fashioned tin can will have returned to nature by 2072, a mere 100 years, and the widely used plastic, PVC, or polyvinyl chloride, would be about 95 per cent degraded by the year 2312.

Squeezing Blood From A Beet...

With flood insurance and blood insurance available now in most areas everybody should be fully covered for all emergencies. Except us. We don't get wet enough to qualify for flood insurance and we can't come up with the pint of blood that's the premium for blood insurance.

Actually, we could join the blood plan, but Wally's chicken. And I'm anemic. Which is a better alibi than being chicken.

The first time I tried to donate a pint of corpuscles was during World War II when the Civil Defense Corps and the Red Cross would take anything. They took the bandages I rolled with accordion pleats in them, and they accepted me as an airplane spotter even though I was so near-sighted that a Messerschmidt would have to land in my lap before I could identify it, and they passed me in the first aid course even if I could never remember the difference between a sprain and a strain.

But they wouldn't take my blood. When I walked into the theater lobby where the blood donor registrations were being taken, the lady looked at me kind of funny. She said, "Can I help you," like she thought I needed help, and I said, "Sure, I want to give some blood." And she said, "GIVE?" I guess she thought I was there for a withdrawal.

At the school gym where the testing went on I had to go through the same routine. First the doubtful look, like maybe I was in the wrong line and I should go stand over there where people were registering for shoe stamps. Then the "GIVE?" in capital letters with the extra big question mark. Finally the reluctant agreement to at least test my blood and the nick in my ear lobe to get a drop for the analysis.

Trouble was, my ear wouldn't stop bleeding and I fell victim to one of my own accordion pleated bandages. I'd always wanted to try my first-aid-course tourniquet moxie. But on an ear lobe?

Between mopping up the blood and looking for a bandage, they never did get around to testing. Besides, the lady said she could tell just by looking that I'd never make it. "Pastel pink isn't the color we look for, honey, better go to your doctor for a checkup."

But my doctor was in the service so I had to wait until the war was over. Which was just as well because my ear didn't stop bleeding until VJ Day. VJ Day-plus-two, doc sent me to a clinic that specialized in blood disorders. Boy, did they specialize! They took a whole

Fence Post Letters To The Editor

Building Moratorium 'Commendable'

Again your newspaper should be commended for focusing attention on the flooding problems which exist in the Northwest suburbs. I had written a letter to this column earlier when I conveyed my impression of the hearing on flooding problems conducted by Senator Graham. At that meeting I had suggested a temporary moratorium on building in the flood plain. Representative Schlickman is the only political figure with the courage to formally announce a similar position until the flood situation can be coordinated and alleviated. He, too, should be commended for his action.

But what about our other stewards such as the municipal mayors and trustees and their appointed planning commissioners? These men had been placed in public office by the citizens whom they represent. We citizens expect our stewards to be accountable and trustworthy. Are our stewards responsive to the needs of the people or more responsive to tax revenue? Let's review a few recent articles that appeared in the Herald to help us assess their stewardship:

—The Herald - Oct. 2, 1972 — Two Housing Developments OK'd by Plan Commission: The substance of this article states that the Wheeling Plan Commission had authorized two housing developments to be built in the flood plain of McDonald Creek. The builder indicates he will take advantage of McDonald Creek.

I'm certain he will, but at whose expense?

Ironically, the Wheeling officials, at a public meeting held not more than two or three weeks prior to this announcement, expressed sympathy and concern about flooding problems in their village. It appears as though they are talking out of both sides of their mouths. On one side they discuss control and on the other they permit development in the flood plain. Mr. Ed Workman of Wheeling, in his letter to the Fence Post, sums up the attitude of officials, "But as they say in the Wheeling Village Hall, stop wailing and keep bailing."

Wheeling officials have permitted indiscriminate building in the flood plain thus contributing to their own flood problems plus aggravating the problems of their neighbors downstream. In addition, their poor planning has cost all its residents additional financial involvement to alleviate flood effects.

—The Herald - Oct. 2, 1972 - Woodfield Mall Is Aggravating Flooding in Area: The article points out the drainage of the mall into Salt Creek creating additional flooding to homeowners along the creek. The village officials were advised that a direct outlet from Woodfield to the creek would compound the flooding dangers, yet they disregarded this advice and proceeded with construction.

—Arlington Heights Planning Commission meeting with regard to Meister Neiberg Co. request for land development along McDonald Creek — Many Arlington Heights residents filed the hearing room to register their concerns to the plan commission with regard to creating additional flooding along the creek, since a substantial portion of the proposed land development lies in the flood plain. Representatives of the homeowners association cited examples of flooded homes in the area and requested the commission to deny the developer's request. The village engineer stated that since there was little flood plain land remaining in Arlington Heights, it would be advisable to deny the petition. However, the plan commission assigned the petition to a sub-committee for further study. Are the commission members purposely side-tracking the issue until the people forget the recent flooding problem? These commissioners should refer to Mr. Lee H. Bridgman's article, "Know the Causes of Flooding" which appeared in the Herald.

I could continue to point out the abuses of flood plain development. Flooding problems are not restricted to just those people affected, but it's everybody's problem. Those homeowners not affected by flood waters are directly involved since the expenditure of additional tax dollars are used to alleviate flooding. More local and state tax monies are spent on flood control projects. Therefore, flooding is a community problem. Had the municipalities of Wheeling, Schaumburg and Arlington Heights initiated precautionary measures prior to the development of the open land they might have saved their citizens extra tax dollars.

Since government officials and their appointed boards and commission members seem to be non-responsive to the citizens' needs, the people must remove them from their stewardship and replace them with a faithful, trustworthy and wise steward. The people have an opportunity to do that this election year.

Fireman's Wife Fights Back

To the lady who wrote the letter about our fireman painting the fire hydrants.

I wonder if she realizes that they are doing this for her, that it saves the fireman time locating that hydrant when responding to a fire, in the middle of the night.

They aren't painting the hydrants to make them pretty, the paint they are using shows up for blocks away.

As far as using the new ambulance, I don't think any mother or injured person would refuse or even care if there were paint cans in the ambulance if they needed it for an emergency or to save their life.

These dedicated men take care of their equipment better than she probably does hers. All a person has to do is walk in the station to see that they don't just sit around all day. They clean their equipment every time they return to the station. Even after hours of fighting fires.

I pray that she, her family, and friends never need the fireman's help. It will make my husband's job easier and safer. Give me a can of paint and a brush; I'll gladly use my car.

Savings Ahead Of Loans

Credit Unions Show Growth

U.S. credit unions grew in 1971 by the largest dollar amounts in history according to official figures in the Credit Union Yearbook 1972 published by the Credit Union National Association Inc. (CUNA). The organization of U.S. credit unions is based in Madison, Wis.

Although loans recovered somewhat from their 1970 slowdown, savings growth continued ahead of loan growth for the second year in a row. The CUNA statistics are for all U.S. credit unions, including federal and state-chartered units.

Savings in credit unions increased by a record $2.8 billion (18.38 per cent) during 1971, compared to $1.8 billion (13.11 per cent) in 1970, to a new high total of $18.3 billion. The greatest percentage growth in history had been a 25.3 per cent rate set in 1968.

Loans outstanding in U.S. credit unions grew by nearly $2 billion in 1971, to a new high total of $16 billion. The growth rate was 14.18 per cent, compared to a 9 per cent increase in 1970.

ASSETS INCREASED more than $3 billion for the first time — an amount greater than the total assets of U.S. credit unions in 1965 — for a growth rate of 13.27 per cent. Assets at the end of 1971 totaled a record $21 billion. The 1970 increase had been just over $3 billion.

For the eighth year in a row, U.S. credit unions added more than one million members in a year. The 1971 growth was over 1.4 million, for a new U.S. total of 24.2 million members at year-end.

For the second straight year, however, there were fewer credit unions in the U.S. at the end of the year than there were at the beginning, due to continued mergers and liquidations. Unlike public financial institutions, most credit unions are formed by employee groups and likely will liquidate and divide members' holdings if a company or plant goes out of business. The members can often continue credit union services by joining another credit union. The total number of U.S. credit unions at the end of 1971 was 23,460, a drop of 239 from a year earlier.

Worldwide, the Yearbook shows, there were 57,197 credit unions at the end of 1971, serving over 43.8 million members, with savings of $24.5 billion and loans outstanding of $20.5 billion. Assets totaled $27.9 billion.

HIGHLIGHTS OF growth outside of the U.S. included a 24 per cent increase in credit union savings in Canada, a 41 per cent increase in savings in Australia, a 32 per cent increase in members in Africa, and a 17 per cent increase in loans outstanding in Latin America.

A credit union is a group of people with a common bond of association who save their money together and make low-cost loans to each other. Each credit union is an independent, nonprofit corporation chartered, supervised and examined by either the federal or state government.

The Credit Union National Association, Inc. (CUNA) is the national association for credit unions in the U.S. Over 90 per cent of the nation's credit unions are affiliated with CUNA through their state credit union leagues.

Bank Unit Merger

Plans were recently announced to merge the communications program of the Foundation for Full Service Banks into that of the American Bankers Association. The move is designed to enable the banking industry to speak with one voice.

Illinois Ranks 3rd In Life Insurance

Illinois ranked third among the states in the amount of life insurance in force last year and fourth in total payments to policyholders, according to the Illinois Business Review.

"The amount of life insurance in force in the state has more than doubled during the past 11 years, rising from $40 billion in 1960 to $95 billion in 1971," the Review said in its Know Your State section. "The average amount of life insurance in force per family in Illinois rose from about $10,000 to nearly $25,000 over the same period."

Reasons seen by railway experts for the Southern's relative prosperity are its determination to remain transportation oriented and avoid the conglomerate pitfalls that got other lines, Penn. Central for example, in trouble. The Southern engages in trucking, forwarding and warehousing, all related to rail transportation and has two new subsidiaries trying to get final permission to engage in novel transport services.

SOUTHERN REGION Coal Transport, Inc., was formed to haul steam coal by barge from mines along the Ohio River to convenient river ports for transshipment by rail to land-locked electric power plants. The ICC hearing examiner has reported favorably on the scheme.

Solid Waste Services is a more imaginative venture. The Southern proposes to contract with cities along its lines to erect compacting plants to compress their solid waste into huge cubes, haul them on flat cars to gully regions and fill in the gullies with a thick layer of soil on top of the compacted trash. The Southern describes this plan in a brochure entitled "Trash Can Be Beautiful."

Profit Sharing Fund Growing

Motorola employees who have participated in the company's profit sharing plan since its inception in 1947, and who have contributed $200 each year during that period, were informed recently that their individual accounts are now worth more than $50,000.

This value marked fulfillment of a profit sharing fund goal set in March, 1962.

Total value of the fund is now $178 million, according to Benjamin W. Borne, Motorola vice president, human relations department, and is invested in high-grade bonds and common stocks. Largest holding of the fund is 272,904 shares of Motorola stock worth $31 million.

Company employees participating in the profit sharing fund contribute a maximum of $200 per year. Motorola then contributes approximately 20 per cent of its annual pre-tax profits, after allowing for a reasonable rate of return for the firm's shareholders.

The profit sharing distribution is paid to employees when they retire or resign from Motorola, or to their family if they die while employed by the firm.

Motorola has major facilities in Franklin Park, Schaumburg, Pontiac and Quincy, Ill.; Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.; Arcadia, N.Y.; and Phoenix, Scottsdale, Mesa and Tempe, Ariz.

It's 'Credit Week'

Credit Week 1972 will be celebrated this week by more than 24 million credit union members.

Join your credit union — it's where you belong — is the theme of this year's celebration. This marks the 123rd anniversary of the financial institutions. The credit union idea was conceived in 1840 by Wilhelm Raiffeisen in Germany.

President Richard M. Nixon issued greetings in honor of National Credit Union Day, Oct. 19.

"The credit union concept of philosophy of self-help and mutual assistance is a sound basis for building better citizenship... Let us mark this important day with a rededication to the principles expressed in the credit union motto: Not for profit, not for charity, but for service."

Cleaning Exposition To Open

The multi-billion dollar coin-op laundry-drycleaning and carwash industries will hold its joint Convention-Exposition in Chicago, Oct. 18-20. Business sessions at the Pick Congress Hotel, with exhibits open 12:30 p.m. at McCormick Place.

According to Ward A. Gill, spokesman for the National Automatic Laundry and Cleaning Council, and National Carwash Council, this will be the largest joint convention ever held by the two industries. Over 6,000 persons are expected to attend with a record-breaking display of nearly 200 exhibitors.

Coin-op laundry-drycleaning operators have doubled their yearly income in 10 years to over $1.3 billion, due primarily to the revolution in easy-care, minimum-care textiles, reported Gill. Yet the price-per-pound to the consumer is just about what it was a decade ago.

Carwashing booms along at some 22,000 installations with income of over $2 billion annually. Market trends indicate this growth will continue, nearly doubling present volume over the next several years, the council stated.

What's Coming To Television

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Notes to watch television by:

The Movies: ABC-TV says it's Oct. 1 Sunday motion picture, "Love Story," got the highest national audience rating of any movie in video history. Second says the network, was "Ben-Hur," followed by "The Birds" and "The Bridge on the River Kwai."

Another recent ABC-TV movie, "Goldfinger," seen Sept. 17, is seventh on the list. Of the top 10, which include made-for-TV movies, seven were broadcast by ABC-TV, five this year. And four of those were made-for-TV films. This season the network is depending heavily on big motion pictures to carry it in the ratings.

FOR INSTANCE, ABC-TV plans to show "Patton," with George C. Scott, on Nov. 19, and "True Grit," with John Wayne, Nov. 12. Its other upcoming movies include "Lawrence of Arabia," "Z," "The Ten Commandments," "Dr. Dolittle," "Plaza Suite," "The Taming of the Shrew" with Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor, and "Paint Your Wagon." This Sunday, ABC-TV offers the movie version of "The Odd Couple" and it has acquired six more James Bond spy films besides "Goldfinger" to begin two seasons hence.

ABC-TV says, by the way, that its two announced made-for-television "movie of the week" films with Burton and Taylor will be seen this season. Entitled "Divorce, His" and "Divorce, Hers," they will be separate but related dramas viewing the dissolution of a marriage through the eyes of each of the involved parties, and will be broadcast the same week.

BECAUSE OF its heavy reliance on movies for ratings this season, ABC-TV is being cautious about giving out the air dates for most of them too far in advance, part of the theory being: This is at least some kind of protection against effective counter-programming that could be worked up earlier by the competing networks if they had more notice.

Premiere: An offbeat, distinctive styled Western, "Kung Fu," about a stoic but warmly human Chinese-American Buddhist priest, who has a price on his head and roams the U.S. frontier of the 1800s, arrives on ABC-TV Saturday night with the first of its occasional hours this season. Unfortunately opposite the high-rated "All in the Family," "Kung Fu" stars David Carradine as the fugitive priest, and he couldn't be much better.

THE APPEAL OF the show is the mystique it achieves through the beliefs and strengths—mental and physical—of its hero, who carries no gun, is against killing, will not eat meat, has an intellectual and religious attachment to the workings of nature, and thus touches on many contemporary chords. ABC would do well to dump one of its weaker shows to make room for "Kung Fu" on a more frequent basis.

The Headliners: Julia Andrews' new ABC-TV variety series came up somewhat in the latest national ratings for the week ending Oct. 1 but she still finished only 48th among 68 programs. Lucille Ball, in her 22nd year on CBS-TV, has already agreed to return next season with her weekly comedy series. Willie May's voices his own role in an hour children's cartoon comedy that offers him as the central character on "The ABC Saturday Superstar Movie" this weekend.

Another Side To College Grid

EVER GET THE feeling that the tail sometimes wags the dog where football in colleges and universities is concerned? I'm talking about overemphasis.

This is no new issue, nor one that is evident in this immediate area, because the only college very near here is Harper and it can hardly be accused of being a grid factory first and institution of higher education second. (I mean this as a compliment).

Yet it's a thought that has hit home to me after attending two college football games this year in highly-contrasting settings. The first was at Northwestern. The second was at Cornell College in Mount Vernon, Iowa.

There may be some snickers at this, but I enjoyed myself as much at the latter site as at the former.

I'm not talking about which type of game — small college or large university — offers the better football, more publicity or more excitement. Obviously it's no battle.

But what if you're one of those rare fans like me, to whom the best football, most excitement and most publicity are not always uppermost in your tastes? What if you have a different concept of what college football should be like — more like the way it used to be way back when?

I must confess that this attitude — that is, my preference for a low-key, social, fun-and-games atmosphere — stems from my own background. I am a graduate of the aforementioned Cornell College (as I have become used to explaining, that's Cornell College, not the university in Ithaca, N.Y.).

I knew little about big-time football. Oh, I've been a Northwestern and sometimes Illinois and Notre Dame fan for a few years. But I've followed their fortunes from a distance, never being as close to the scene as a student.

Therefore, I can't say much, firsthand, about the evils of major college football — the slush funds, gambling, ticket-scalping and whatever other perils exist. I will say that I deplore red-shirting and commend the Big Ten for not allowing it. Red-shirting, to me, is the most flagrant and shameful case of overemphasis. It means some "students" are kept in school a year after they could have graduated and gotten a start in a profession — for the sole purpose of playing football. What is a college for, anyway? That's what I mean about the dog wagging the tail.

Anyway, the best story I've heard that illustrates my point about major college grid is this:

There was an Ohio State fan with a season ticket for the umpteenth consecutive attending a home game for the zillionth straight time without a miss. On this particular day, sometime during the game, he turned to the guy sitting next to him and remarked, "Well, my son ought to be going down the aisle about now."

"What aisle?" the other asked.

"The wedding aisle," was the answer. "He's getting married this afternoon."

"Your son is getting married and you're at a football game?"

"Damn right. I told him that would happen if he got married on a Saturday when Ohio State was playing at home."

I wouldn't understand. I went to a school where football is more like an afterthought, where you don't need a ticket in advance — or a ticket, period — to get in, where those who attend games do so mainly to kill time, since there's not much else to do in Mount Vernon, Iowa on a Saturday afternoon.

Football at Cornell College and other places like it is considered a game, not an obsession or a religion. That's something that might not be easily grasped by some people in places like South Bend, Lincoln, Columbus and Tuscaloosa.

At a small, innocent, peaceful place like Cornell, it is equally hard for me to understand things like national ratings, insane shrieks at pep rallies, players almost killing their own teammates getting "loose" in a pre-game huddle, burning the school initials on the chapel steps of the arch-rival school, fights breaking out in the stands, and 60,000 or more people paying $7 apiece to see young boys who are supposed to be students playing a game. A game. That's what I thought football was.

I will admit that I enjoy major-college football, that the mania can be a good, unifying thing for a school or even a whole community. It can give people a chance to be merry, to forget their troubles and those of the world, to release tensions.

And for the player, much good can come from big-time college grid. If he's one of the very best, he can prepare for the professional game. If he's not, he still benefits from all the values that go with team play and striving for excellence.

However, there is also something to be said for the little guy in college football. He too learns worthwhile values — and maybe avoids some of the not-so-worthy ones.

And what's wrong with a leisurely picnic lunch, a pleasant stroll to a small-college game right at kickoff time, with no traffic or parking problems, no worries about getting a good seat? And no gnashing of teeth over a loss; no letting it ruin one's whole day, week, month or season.

To rabid fans of teams with national prominence, there is another side to college football. Try it, you'll like it!

Weekend Cross Country Report

Hersey, Fremd Runners Sparkle; Prospect, Palatine Also Impress

by LARRY EVERHART
It was another busy day of invitational for Mid-Suburban League cross country teams Saturday. Ten of the league's 12 teams were split among three big meets at Mattoon, Libertyville and Addison Trail.

Hersey and Fremd came up with the most impressive showings and Prospect and Palatine also had solid efforts.

Individually, outstanding juniors Arnold Jackson of Schaumburg (still undefeated in all meets of any kind) and Jim Wise of Forest View (who has lost only to Jackson) both racked up crowns to add to their plentiful collections.

The final slate of action for the MSL's regular season takes place with six duals tonight. Forest View is at Palatine, Elk Grove at Arlington, Conant at Schaumburg, Hersey at Wheeling, Rolling Meadows at Prospect and Fremd at Glenbard North.

Following those meets, this Saturday, a dogfight is expected in the conference meet at Union 78 Co. Oil grounds near Hoffman Estates. This will determine half of the final standings.

Here's the rundown from Saturday:

AT MATTOON

Hersey really opened some eyes, running its best meet of the season and finishing an outstanding second against some of the top teams in the state. Only LaGrange beat out the upstart Huskies, who finished above state-ranked Riverside-Brookfield and highly-regarded Palatine. There were 39 teams in all.

The winning point total was 67 for LaGrange, Hersey had 88, R-B 119 and Palatine 129. Oak Park was fifth and Lane Tech sixth.

Sophomore Jay McCarthy led the way for Hersey with a glittering 13:19 over the 2.8-mile course for eighth place in a field of about 280 runners.

Craig Virgin of Lebanon, best distance runner in state history and one of the best in the country, dazzled the usual large crowd for this traditional meet with 12:37. He had an amazing 4:19 pace for the first mile.

Scott Williams of Palatine was the area's other outstanding individual, running right behind McCarthy into the chute.

Hersey was aided by some other excellent showings — Tom Burridge's 13th (13:32), Dan Leider's 23rd (13:44), Ron Stephani's 24th (13:45), John Jones' 36th (13:51), Dave Jones' 45th and Chris Cooney's 64th.

John Thullen turned in a very commendable race for Palatine, rising to No. 3 man with 22nd place. Dave Teble was 29th, Bill O'Neill 32nd, Paul Kearns 37th, Steve Peterson 66th and Carl Kiewert

Harper Heads Invite; Now 7-0 In Dual Meets

It was a very profitable and enjoyable weekend for Harper College's ever-improving cross country team.

The Hawks made people sit up and take notice when they won the 17-team Milwaukee Tech Invitational Saturday after running their dual meet record to 7-0 with a double win Thursday.

The impressive showings prompted coach Bob Nolan to comment, "I can't say enough about our top three runners — Ron Hankel, Bill Bates and Mike DeLa Bruere. They're really coming into their own. We'll have a good shot at winning our Region." (This is something the Hawks have not yet done though winning the Skyway Conference title the past two seasons).

The victory in Saturday's big meet, which included 120 runners, was a real squeaker. Harper and Wright of Chicago actually finished in a tie in points but Harper was awarded the victory because it topped Wright 24-29 in dual-meet scoring.

Highest finishers among other teams near this area were Triton in sixth place and DuPage (which has won the Region the last two years) in seventh.

Wright had the individual winner with a standout 20:30 time for four miles. Hankel was third with 21:33 and DeLa Bruere fourth, two seconds behind. Bates claimed sixth with 21:46.

John Geary, returning for the first time after being out with an injury, ran 23rd with 22:47. He was Harper's No. 2 man last year and could be a big help the rest of the way. "I thought he did very well considering he's only had two weeks to work out," said Nolan.

Just four seconds back of Geary was Tom Klinker with 22:51. Other Hawks were Larry Cyrier and Brian Rehman.

Harper had celebrated the first meet ever held on its own campus Thursday with easy victories of 17-45 over McHenry and 17-44 over Waukegan. That made it 23 wins in a row in dual meets dating back to October, 1976.

Hankel continued to be the team's No. 1 runner, winning the race in 21:17, four seconds ahead of Bates. DeLa Bruere was third with 21:30, Klinker sixth with 23:11, Cyrier ninth with 24:37 and Mike Mills 10th with 24:54.

The Hawks go on the road to meet Amundson and Lake County Wednesday and are in the DuPage Invitational Saturday morning. The biggest affair of the season, the Region IV meet, will be Saturday, Oct. 28 in Springfield.

ANOTHER WIN: Ron Hankel, top cross country runner at Harper College, adds to his collection of victories by taking first place in a double dual against McHenry and Waukegan. Hankel, formerly of Prospect High, was clocked in 21:17 for four miles as Harper raised its record to 7-0 in dual meets with a pair of wins. Right behind Hankel is Bill Bates, a Forest View grad.

16-18 — Steve Paily, Wood Dale, and

12 and under — Johnny Grant, Park Ridge; Eddie Dippel, Arlington Heights; Sean Duffy, Chicago; and Daniel Weiss, Schaumburg, alternates.

The "Excellence" concept, now eight years old, has been a major factor in raising Chicago-area junior tennis to all-time-high national levels. With the CDTA paying most of the freight, more than 300 promising youngsters who survive tryouts are given four months of intensive training under top-notch professional instructors at 17 indoor locations from Lake Forest to Harvey, and from Chicago to Wheaton. The object: to develop champions. The best dividends so far: Billy Martin, Sue Stap, Sandy Stap and Ted Starn.

100th. Coach Joe Johnson felt the latter two men could have finished higher but for hip injuries.

Hersey served notice that it must be considered a threat in the conference meet and Palestine could also play a big role, especially if Peterson and Kiewert are completely healthy.

AT LIBERTYVILLE
Fremd had no problem romping to the team title as expected. The Vikings have won every meet this year (including three invitational) with the exception of the powerful Peoria Invitational when they were second to top-rated York.

Prospect ran a very fine race also for second place in the nine-team field while Conant was fifth and Schaumburg sixth.

Jackson dominated the scene individually with 13:46 over the 2.5 miles, believed to be the course and meet record. Conditions were good on the hilly layout at Adler Park.

Fremd showed off an outstanding, close pack for its top five men, taking five places in a row (fourth through eighth) with only a 12-second difference. Jazmie Olson led the way with 14:34 for fourth and was followed in close order by Chuck Ruppenthal, Steve Inbody, Ken Gebel and Mike Rohrer.

Mike Tyre led Prospect with 14:48 for ninth place. Don Burger came in 12th with 14:58. Rich Reithal 15th with 15:00. Mike Skelton 26th with 15:07 and Tom Nemee 36th with 15:32. "It was the best we've run all year," said coach Joe Wanner.

Conant's top man was Dave Elderkin in 10th. Others were Bob Every in 19th, Steve Watron 23rd, Dave Mansolf 24th, Kent McDill 27th, John Bond 37th and Rick Jensen 39th.

Schaumburg, after Jackson's standout time, had Mike Carey 17th, Ron Healer 34th, Mike Isok 42nd, Mike Palmer 44th, John Schevikhoven 45th and Doug Warlick 54th.

In lower level races Fremd duplicated the feat of the varsity by running away with the title and Conant was the top freshman team. Prospect was second and Schaumburg third in soph competition while Schaumburg also took third and Fremd fourth among frosh units.

Dave Scott of Fremd won the soph race with 15:03. Paul Kenyon was third and Kevin Richardson fourth. Ron Beber of Conant was second although his team was ninth. Brian Pomrenko of Prospect took fifth and Keith Spacapan ninth. Festus Cloonan led the Saxon sophos with 13th.

In frosh competition, Mike Moran of Schaumburg was second and Jeff Olson and Steve Lind of Conant third and fourth, respectively.

AT ADDISON TRAIL
In another nine-team affair Elk Grove turned in the best area showing with third, Forest View was fourth, Wheeling sixth and Rolling Meadows ninth. Fenton was the easy team winner with 41 points to Addison Trail's 84 and Elk Grove's 90. Forest View totaled 94.

Wise of the Falcons added another trophy to his shelf with 13:40 for 2.5 miles, one of his greatest times ever. Elk Grove had the steadily outstanding Brian Powell in second place and Damian Archbold in sixth. Rich Nilsson was fifth for Forest View. Bruce Messinger paced Wheeling with ninth and Rolling Meadows' top runner was Rich Jensen with 26th.

Other places for each school were as follows:
Elk Grove — Dave Jackson 13th, Dave Dill 18th, Duane Fitzlewitz 51st.

Forest View — Tony Hess 29th, Larry Keen 30th, Mike Wieser 35th.

Wheeling — Brian Crehan 20th, Steve Wilhelm 25th, Jeff Schuster 27th, Jim Leeper 30th.

In frosh-soph competition, Willowbrook won, Maine South was second, Wheeling third, Rolling Meadows fourth, Forest View fifth and Elk Grove ninth.

Top area boy on the lower level was Meadows' Mike Scott with sixth place. Teammates Brad Huddleston and Jim Conroy were 11th and 12th. For Wheeling, Peter Mulcany was eighth and Mike Cormack ninth. Mike Ham led Forest View with 25th.

Is Television Slowing Down Golf?

by MURRAY OLDERMAN
NAPA, Calif. — (NEA) — That old devil, television, is getting blamed again. The issue now is slow play on the golf course during professional tournaments.

"There's not a round goes by," says Bob Lunn, the big bear of a man who swats a ball as far as Jack Nicklaus, "when the foursome I'm playing in doesn't start talking about how long it takes to play — and how it's getting longer all the time."

Since a pro like Lunn plays some 35 tournaments a year, and plays four rounds each tournament, plus pro-ams, that means at least 150 discussions devoted to the predisposition of some players to linger endlessly over the pellet before striking it.

And all the time we thought the rapping between players during a round centered either on the sexual proclivities of the snug-panted blonde behind the fifth green or the pretension of the wrists to fade, a shot with just the right calibration on a tree-faced dogleg right.

So where does television fit into this act?

"It," says Johnny Miller, with shining bright eyes and cotton hair, one of the rising young stars, "is where they all learn to play slow."

"The young kids coming up, they've been watching all the big names of golf fussing over their shots, playing it real slow. So they figure that's the way to do it, too."

Any discussion of slow play leads naturally to Nicklaus, who has often been accused of dawdling and has this habit of standing interminably over his putts.

"Actually," says Miller, "Jack isn't one of the slow ones. Besides, it doesn't matter with him. He's always playing in the last foursome on the course anyhow."

Johnny grins lightly. The dictates of TV always save the best for last, and since Nicklaus is generally leading, the pace of his play isn't going to affect the field.

Lunn and Miller, tuning up for the Kaiser Open at Silverado as the days of the tour dwindled down for '72, are genuinely concerned about the effect of slow play on the popularity of their game. They are, ironically, part of the tour's younger generation, whom they themselves have pin-pointed as the major culprits. Lunn is 27; Miller is 25.

"But we," says Johnny, "are already from a different era than the guys coming out of college now. Why, I remember playing national juniors in two hours and 15 minutes. That's because when we learned to play golf, we couldn't afford to pay those green fees, so we had to sneak on the course early in the morning before anybody got there or play late in the afternoon and we had to hustle around."

FAN FARE

By Walt Ditzen

No one has to push the old-timers like Doug Ford and Julius Boros. They just step up and hit the ball. So does Lee Trevino. Of course, a wily gray-head like Doug Sanders isn't above slowing up his game to psyche an opponent. He played a TV match with Miller, and Johnny is convinced that Sanders deliberately twiddled between taps to upset him, knowing how Johnny felt about delays.

The Professional Golfers Association is conscious of the lagging tempo and its officials are empowered to impose two-stroke penalties when golfers hold up play, the same way a baseball umpire theoretically can call a ball on a pitcher who scratches and squirms too long between pitches. But the PGA people are generally loathe to do it (for one thing, they're employed by the players).

"And two strokes," says Lunn, "is pretty severe. I'd rather see them fine the players. Start taking 50 and 100 bucks out of their mouths, and they'll speed up."

The other inequity is that under the current rules all the members of an off-feeding foursome are penalized for the time transgressions of one slow player.

"So," notes Miller, "supposing Rod Funseth, who generally flies around the course, gets stuck for a round with a guy who takes too much time. You can play as fast as your slowest player. It wouldn't be fair to Rod to stick him with two strokes."

The only hope may be to keep the TV cameras from focusing on all those post-ers frozen over putts, ingraining bad habits in the youth of America. They could use action inserts of the Ding-a-Ling Sisters until the guy actually strokes the ball.

'The Key' And Defense Lead Lions

by PAUL LOGAN

No, Mike Dougherty didn't quarterback St. Viator against Holy Cross Sunday. No, the area's local parochial school hadn't retired potential all-star Stan Bobowski's jersey early in the first quarter at River Grove.

Meet always No. 12, Bobowski faked out quite a few Lion fans for a while by wearing Dougherty's number after his scrambling cost him his jersey. Although the hosting Crusaders knew it was Stan after the quick change, he still fooled and faked the talented team of Coach Frank Mariani for a very big 14-0 victory.

"Our defensive ends had trouble containing Bobowski," said Mariani after seeing the Crusaders' chances for a Suburban Catholic Conference Eastern Division title just about fade away. "He's the key."

"The Key" led his team into the Holy Cross end zone in the first two quarters with timely passes and equally efficient running plays.

"The first punt of the game was the turning point," said Mariani. "Like I've said, we've been averaging 40 or 45 yards a punt."

A 20-yarder let St. Viator set up on the Crusader 30. A short time later Frank Cliggett went over from the seven.

Midway through the second quarter, a six-yard punt allowed the Lions to begin their march from the Holy Cross 47.

"We never figured to turn over the ball like that," said the Crusader coach. "That's the first time we ever turned over the ball on that side of the field (via a punt)."

St. Viator's drive seemed to stall on the Cross two as Stan was stopped for no gain. After a consultation with head coach Jim Lyne, Tom Maher took a pitch and raced around left end for the score.

"We had the feeling we could score at any time," said Lyne. "We didn't pass as much as we could have. We felt pretty confident he (Stan) could pass when he wanted to."

Stan completed six straight before missing his last two tosses of the half. He hit on six of nine for 53 yards, but he only attempted one in the second half.

Lyne dismissed the notion that his team played conservatively in the second half.

"Field position dictated that," he said. "We didn't tell him to cool it on the pas-

Frank Mariani

The Lion defenders were even more adept at keeping the Crusaders' potent wishbone offense at bay. Averaging 400 yards a game, the loser could take out just 64.

If you asked before the game that we'd hold them under 70 yards, I'd probably have said no," remarked Lyne. "I was surprised with the efficiency of our defensive ball club."

Besides singling out co-captain Ralph Bosch, a tackle, and end Andy Michuda, Lyne also praised defensive coordinator Sal Nuccio and secondary coach Bill Tirmann.

Pat Mahoney, who handles the offensive line, was also lauded for sometimes performing miracles with kids who aren't 100 per cent, according to Lyne.

The only scores the state ranked Crusaders could manage off the also highly rated Lions was through aggressive defensive play. A blocked punt led to a safety and a blind side hit produced a 45-yard touchdown.

Despite the narrow lead, Lyne wasn't too worried. The reason — old No. 11.

"He wins football games with brains and with his desire," said Stan's coach. "Bobowski, especially in the Lane Tech game, had super stats. People began pointing at him."

"People are coming up with special defense — a heck of a compliment. He's still a great quarterback without super stats. He's coming up with the big play when he has to. He's doing the intangible things right now that are helping us win."

"He's probably not going to have great rushing yardage with people pointing at him. A defense can do that... can stop one player."

However, Lyne added that St. Viator's balanced attack is upsetting the plans of the opposition. And, halfway through the season, it is carrying on the pre-season hopes of the Lions.

"We have a dream — we want to be 10-0," said Lyne. "We want to win them all."

That's a tough proposition since St. Viator's had one tough challenge after another so far this season. Mariani thinks they've got a chance.

"I can't see anybody beating Viator," said St. Viator's first head coach in the early 1960s. "Only team I can possibly see — if they get their quarterback back — is Marist. They're hitters."

After seeing his team's 10-game winning streak ended as well as only his 20th loss in 67 games, Mariani knows that he lost to an outstanding St. Viator team.

One thing's for sure, the school had better order plenty of extra No. 12 jerseys for the remainder of the season.

Lake County Favored In Fox Bend Sectional

College of Lake County's golf team — recorder of a brilliant 11-under-par 281 last week — has to be heavily favored at the Fox Bend Sectional Tournament Tuesday.

Undeclared in all endeavors so far this year, the Skyway Conference leader could find its toughest competition coming from league sister schools Mayfair and Harper. These three and 10 other teams will be seeking seven qualifying sports for the Region IV tourney Oct. 27-28 at Champaign.

Figuring to offer the strongest tests outside the league are Joliet and College of DuPage.

Other SC representatives looking for berths will be Elgin, Oakton, Triton, Waukegan and McHenry. Joining them will be Morton, Thornton and Prairie State.

Besides the seven teams that will advance, the top five individuals who are not members of the advancing teams will also make the trip to the challenging University of Illinois Orange Course.

State Won't Open Rte. 53 At I-90 Intersection

The state of Illinois has no intention of opening Ill. Rte. 53 at the point it intersects Interstate 90 because of the danger of traffic moving the wrong direction on the Interstate, Sigmund Ziejewski, state transportation engineer, said last week.

In answer to a suggestion that Rte. 53 be made a southbound exit from Interstate 90, Ziejewski said the danger of the traffic attempting to enter the federal highway from Rte. 53 makes that alternative prohibitive.

Officials from Elk Grove Village, Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates have been concerned about the movement of traffic along Interstate 90 and Ill. Rte. 53 since the opening of the Interstate in September and the dead-ending of Rte. 53 where it joined the Interstate.

Reaching Alexian Brothers Medical Center on Blesterfield Road in Elk Grove Village also has become a problem for traffic coming to the village from the northwest.

ZIEJEWSKI SAID in an effort to enable traffic to find the quickest route to the hospital signs have been placed on Ill. 72 and Arlington Heights Road for westbound, eastbound and southbound traffic.

George Richter, operations engineer at the Illinois Highway Department, said there also are some informational signs for Alexian Brothers Medical Center posted on Rte. 53.

He said that the hospital has requested that signs be placed on Interstate 90, but the hospitals can only be marked on interstates if they have been designated as trauma centers.

"The Illinois Department of Public Health lists all hospitals certified as trauma centers, and so far Alexian Brothers Medical Center has not been designated as one," Richter said. He added that the federal highway markers for hospitals would have a symbol for a hospital on it and would not carry the name of the hospital.

AN OFFICIAL AT the Cook County Highway Department said yesterday so far he had not received a request for highway markers on county highways around the village, but the matter would be looked into.

Meanwhile Elk Grove Village and Schaumburg fire departments have worked out a cooperative arrangement for handling emergencies on the section of Interstate between Thorndale Avenue and Ill. Rte. 72.

Elk Grove Village Fire Chief Allen Hulet said if there was an accident or fire in the northbound lane of the Interstate, Schaumburg will respond. If something happened in the southbound lanes, Elk Grove Village fire department would handle it and transport patients to Alexian Brothers hospital.

THE ELK GROVE VILLAGE Fire Department's "Sparky" mascot attends activities of various organizations throughout the year telling children to be careful with fire and emphasizing the importance of fire prevention. Here, he entertained students at the Queen of the Rosary Catholic School last year.

Natural Water Flow Is Now Through Her Home

Move Meeting Spot

The October, November and December meetings of the Over 40 Club in Elk Grove Village has been moved to the Elk Grove Park District's community center in Lions Park. The October meeting will be held at 10 a.m. tomorrow. Previously the meetings had been held at the Elk Grove Village Public Library.

It was a wet summer for Northwest suburban residents, but for the John Horvath family, 704 Roppolo Dr., in unincorporated Elk Grove Township, this summer was the worst in eight years of flooding.

According to Mrs. Horvath, the natural flow of a drainage ditch in the field north of her home was reversed after landfill and construction work was done on the site.

The ditch, which connects with Higgins Creek, used to flow south to north. As a result of the work done in the field, the ditch now runs north to south. Whenever there is a rain, the ditch drains water from the creek and floods her home and other neighbors in the area.

"When it rains one inch, we get a foot of water," said Mrs. Horvath.

This summer's heavy rains caused an estimated $4,050 damage to their home and another $3,000 in personal property was ruined, according to Mrs. Horvath.

MRS. CHARLOTTE JONES, who lives across the street from the Horvaths estimated her home suffered "several thousand dollars damage." There were "miscellaneous personal items damaged which were thrown out."

Residents of the area are trying to obtain relief from the flooding problem through the township.

Bernie Lee, Elk Grove Township auditor, said Bongli Cartage Co. and the Natural Gas Pipeline Co. of America were contacted about possible responsibility for the flooding.

According to Mrs. Horvath, Bongli Cartage landfilled the area in 1964 which caused the reversal of the drainage ditch flow. When the pipeline company laid a pipe through the field, a system of drainage tiles was broken up and never replaced, she said.

Lee said Bongli Cartage replied with a letter citing authority to landfill the area. Lee said he has asked for a copy of the authorization, but he has not received a reply.

THE PIPELINE company has not yet replied, said Lee.

Neither Bongli Cartage nor pipeline company officials could be reached for comment yesterday.

Title to the land is held in a numbered trust by a Chicago bank. Mrs. Horvath is trying to trace the owner through the bank.

Mrs. Horvath has acquired a file of correspondence to various state agencies, trying to get help. "They all say there are no funds available to help us," said Mrs. Horvath. "We can't seem to get them to understand that we don't want taxpayers' money to stop the flooding. We just want them (the agencies) to get the people responsible for the flooding to correct the problem."

Creek Watershed Pact Circulated

The Upper Salt Creek Watershed Agreement is now being circulated among various federal agencies in Washington, D.C., prior to being submitted to the Congress for approval of federal funding.

Barry Good, legislative assistant to Sen. Adlai Stevenson III, D-Ill., said Monday the agreement must be reviewed by 10 agencies. The comments these agencies have on the agreement will be included in a report to the Senate public works commission.

The commission will then take action on the possible federal funding of the project.

IF THE COMMISSION recommends approval of federal funds, and Congress can act on the measure in the next legislative session, the funds would be available for the 1974 fiscal year which starts July 1, 1973.

The Upper Salt Creek Watershed Agreement is a $28.5 million plan to build flood controls across the creek. Federal funds for approximately half the cost of the project are being requested. These funds would be administered through the U.S. Soil Conservation Service.

The balance of the funds would come from state and local government agencies. Sixteen state and local agencies signed the agreement before it was sent to Washington in mid-September.

On Sept. 19, Gov. Richard Ogilvie announced the state would not wait for federal funding, but would expand the program and begin work at once. The governor made his announcement after suburban areas along the creek had suffered extensive flood damage.

On Friday, the U.S. Soil Conservation Service approved the state's plan to begin work on a flood control in the Busse Woods section of the Ned Brown Forest Preserve.

Thousands Must Prove Voter Eligibility

Thousands of registered voters in the Northwest suburbs have been challenged to prove their eligibility, or be unable to vote in the Nov. 7 general elections.

The widespread distribution of notices informing voters "to show cause why registration to vote should not be canceled" apparently stems from the efforts of overzealous canvassers attempting to remove from registration rolls persons who have changed their names, moved or died.

A spokesman for the election department in the Cook County clerk's office said voters who received the notices but who have not changed their names or addresses can disregard the stipulation that they appear in person before the Board of Revision in Chicago yesterday or today.

To remain registered, however, voters who received the notice must mail it to the board's office, Room 402, County Building, 188 N. Clark St., Chicago, by the end of this week.

The notice should be signed attesting to the voter's eligibility but need not be notarized, the spokesman said.

THE CLERK'S office on Monday was deluged with "millions of calls from all over," according to the spokesman.

The distribution of registration cancellation warnings apparently was not politically motivated. In many cases, newly registered voters received the notices. In some cases, persons who have lived at the same addresses for 15 years were challenged. And in other instances some members of a family were challenged and not others.

"What are they trying to do," said one Palatine village trustee, — disenfranchise everyone?"

This Morning In Brief

The State

The president of largely black Malcolm X College charged that authorities investigating the alleged "Do Mau Mau" murders of nine white persons perpetrated for political reasons "the myth that black people come out of the ghetto, sweep down and kill the whites."

Ironically, Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie's call for a special legislative session on tax and school finance drew some Democratic praise and a hint of indifference from one high-ranking Republican, Senate President Pro Tem Cecil Pardee of Chicago.

A defense attorney argued that the prosecution's evidence is "wholly insufficient" to convict Cook County State's Atty. Edward V. Hanrahan and 13 co-defendants in the Black Panther police raid case.

Bernard Carey, Republican candidate for Cook County state's attorney, said he has appealed to President Nixon to station federal marshals in Chicago to prevent vote fraud in the November election.

Actress Jane Fonda, leading a group of antiwar activists speaking to Southern Illinois University's Carbondale campus said President Nixon has escalated the war and that Sen. George McGovern could end it.

The Nation

A small army of police fanned out through Brooklyn and three suburban counties, carrying subpoenas for 677 persons linked with an "organized crime headquarters" which had been under surveillance for a year. A district attorney said the headquarters was in a trailer in an automobile junkyard.

The Supreme Court voted 7-2 to refuse another legal effort to have the Vietnam War declared unconstitutional.

President Nixon made an unscheduled visit to a convention of families of American POWs and promised that "under no circumstances" would the men be abandoned. He also said their men had paid too high a price in Vietnam for him to grant amnesty to those who refused to serve there.

The World

Dynamiters blew up railway tracks and riot police smashed locks on downtown stores that defied an army order to open during nationwide strikes which have crippled Chile. Chile's top Communist official said a "revolt" was under way. While police smashed the locks, hundreds of demonstrators screamed, "Chile is and always will be a land of liberty."

The War

Heavy fighting erupted in the war-scarred mountain jungles outside of Hue, while far to the south, Vietnamese government troops reopened a major highway into Saigon. U.S. planes battered an airfield far north of Hanoi. Three American aircraft were reported lost in operations elsewhere in Indochina.

The Market

Stock prices dropped to their lowest level since July 21 on the New York Stock Exchange as investors remained cautious. Trading was light. The Dow Jones Industrial average closed off 8.80 at 921.66, close to the July 21 reading of 920.45. Declines outnumbered advances 985 to 415 among 1,749 issues on the tape. Teacher Of First Aid Saves A Life

by STEVE BROWN

The old adage, "practice what you preach" has been around for many years, but for one Schaumburg resident the familiar saying took on much more meaning recently.

Ken Dopp, a jack of all trades in the area, had just finished teaching an American Red Cross first aid class at Fremd High School in Palatine and was on his way home when he witnessed a serious auto accident.

Dopp rushed to the assistance of one of the injured persons and began to administer first aid procedures.

"I found myself hard-pressed to follow my own teaching," Dopp explained. He added just minutes before the crash he had concluded a class on first aid theory.

"ONE OF THE MOST important elements is to gain the confidence of the patient, and this was a real test," Dopp said.

He admitted that scene was not a pretty one and that he felt a little "squeamish" when he first arrived at the scene.

Dopp said that within minutes several Lake County police officers and an ambulance unit from the Lake Zurich Fire Department arrived.

"It was beautiful to see five strangers, all with training, instantaneously operate as a team," Dopp remarked. He said the quick work enabled the man to reach emergency treatment much quicker.

He also said the incident brings home the need and importance of first aid training. Dopp said in most cases the only people to take the training are those required by law to do so.

"THIS IS SOMETHING that everyone should know, because you never know what situation you might become involved in," Dopp explained.

An environmental technician for the Palatine Health Department, Dopp finds the time to teach the first aid class several nights each week.

"It is incidents like this that make me glad that I am prepared to help out and I think that everyone should take the time to get the training," Dopp said.

Church Won't Control Maryville Classrooms

The Archdiocese of Chicago will have "absolutely no element of control" over additional school facilities for students at Maryville Academy, State Rep. Eugene Schlickman said Thursday.

Schlickman made the statement at a meeting of the Forest River Civic Association in reply to a resident who asked if school Dist. 26 planned to lease land from the Archdiocese for the additional facilities.

SCHLICKMAN sponsored a bill last year that provides that a school district can declare an emergency and apply for state funds for school buildings when a nonpublic school closes resulting in an increased enrollment by 5 per cent or more to a public school district. Such an "emergency" occurred in Dist. 26 in 1968 when Catholic Charities announced it could no longer afford to educate the Maryville children, who are wards of the state.

According to Dist. 26 Supt. Tom Warden, there were three possibilities being considered for the location of the new facilities for the Maryville students. One of these was that the district might lease land for the facilities from Maryville. After consulting with Warden and Gene Kukla, the former principal of the River Road School at Maryville, however, Schlickman said it was "their opinion that the additional facilities were going to be away and off from the Archdiocesan premises."

IT IS UP TO THE Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction to determine what's to be built, whether additional classrooms or a new school, and where these facilities are to be built, Schlickman said. Once these decisions are made, "It is the prerogative of the capital financing development board to purchase the land, hire the architect and supervise construction," Schlickman said.

Dist. 26 notified the Governor's Office of Human Resources of its request for "emergency" status for Maryville several weeks ago. However, no formal request was made to the Capital Financing Development Board, which is in charge of determining approval for the district's request. The delay in administering the bill was not the fault of Dist.

26, however, Schlickman said.

Only recently the Capital Financing Development Board took the place of the Illinois School Building Commission. "There have been a lot of headaches," with the changeover, Schlickman said. "John Moore, executive director of the Development Board, has been apologetic," however, Schlickman said.

He said Moore told him that he sent Warden a draft of a letter the school district could follow in applying for emergency status on Wednesday. Schlickman said Moore told him he would be contacting Warden about approval early this week.

THURSDAY NIGHT'S meeting was originally scheduled as a debate on parochialism between Schlickman and Democrat Edward Warman. The two are in the Fourth District state legislative race. Instead of a debate, however, the two men simply gave a short talk and then asked the audience for questions.

Schlickman mentioned that he was in favor of parochialism since it reduces the cost of maintaining these children in public schools, gives parents a choice of educational system and provides a stimulus for improvement of the public schools. Warman agreed saying that though he voted against parochialism in 1969, he now feels that it is constitutionally possible.

Schlickman also mentioned he was concerned about flood control in the unincorporated areas of the Fourth District. He said he found it "deplorable and scandalous" that the Cook County Board of Commissioners had not adopted a comprehensive flood control plan for suburban Cook County. Schlickman said he has recommended that no unit of government should be able to exercise a zoning authority unless there is a comprehensive plan for the area.

Yes, Virginia, Even Santa Takes Pay

by TONI GINETTI

If you have kids at home, please don't let them see this. I'd hate to be the one blamed for spoiling a sacred childhood belief.

I've just found out that Santa Claus gets paid. That's right, he gets paid for giving presents and spreading good cheer at Christmas time. Not only that, he gets paid pretty well in my opinion, $3 an hour!

At least that's what he makes at Woodfield. I found that out when I noticed an ad in the job section advertising for a Santa Claus for the mall. What does it take to be Santa Claus?

"A fat man with a deep voice," said Jerry Dempsey, with a laugh. He is the man at Woodfield who will decide this week who will be the mall's Santa. "Seriously, though, it's one of the hardest things to do all year. We never anticipate a smooth-running operation."

DEMPSEY EXPLAINED this was so because, as terrible as this may sound, being Santa is "the toughest, most physically draining and mentally mind-bending experience there is. It's worse than digging ditches!"

"You have to realize 'Santa' has to pick up just about every child, and that amounts sometimes to a child a minute. The complaints at the end of the day are always of stiff arms and sore backs, as if they were chopping wood all day," he said.

In fact, Dempsey said, the job is so demanding that it's just too much for one person to handle. Santa's 70-hour work week will be manned in shifts by six persons. Incidentally, women need not apply because, while Dempsey said he'd be willing to talk to a girl if she came in for the job, "we try to stick to the traditional kind of concept of Santa that will come across best psychologically for the kids."

He's got a point there. But sometimes outside appearances might not tell the true story of a person's qualifications for a job like Santa's. Take, for example, what might happen if one of the some 15 applicants Dempsey interviews this week was the real (yes, Virginia) Santa. A standard job interview might not turn out too well...

"I saw your ad in the paper for Santa Claus, so I thought I'd come down and find out what you wanted," Santa might say.

"I TAKE IT you'd like to apply for a job as Santa," the interviewer asks. "Not AS Santa, I AM Santa."

"I see," the interviewer says, trying to humor him. "Your name is Santa Claus?"

"No, my name is Christopher Kringle, but many children prefer to call me Santa or St. Nicholas."

"Is that so," the interviewer answers cautiously. "All right Mr. Kringle, let's just fill out this application. Do you live in the neighborhood?"

"NO, I LIVE in the North Pole."

"And how would you get to work each day?"

"Well I have this team of eight tiny reindeer who can fly my sleigh here in no time."

The interviewer wipes his brow and then asks, "I'll need some references and information on past job experience."

"For the past 100 years I've worked one night a year delivering toys to good children all over the world," he answers. "The rest of the time I supervise the work at my toy factory."

"Then you're self-employed."

"YOU MIGHT SAY that. As for a reference, you could put Mr. Clement Moore."

"And what is your relation to Mr. Moore?"

"Oh, he's just a friend. I visited him one Christmas Eve and he wrote a poem about me."

"One last question, Mr. Kringle, do you have any dependents?"

"Oh, yes, 150 elves."

"I DON'T KNOW whether the IRS will allow that many," the interviewer answers nervously.

"Well, that's okay, I wouldn't want to cause any trouble," Santa answers as he rises from his chair. "If that's all the questions, may I ask when I start the job?"

"Let me put it this way, Mr. Kringle, don't call us, we'll call you."

Worker Dies In Cave-In

A construction worker was killed early yesterday afternoon by a cave-in at the Moon Lakes Apartments in Hoffman Estates.

The accident, which took the life of Andres Sisfuentes, 35, of 819 Ash St., Waukegan, occurred when a large mound of clay fell into a ditch Sisfuentes and another man were digging.

Sisfuentes was pronounced dead on arrival at Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights. A co-worker, Leonardo Escamille, 28, of 65 Clayton St., Waukegan was treated and released from the hospital.

Both men were employed by the Rosetti Construction Co. of Rolling Meadows. Police said the accident occurred about 1:30 p.m. near Moon Lake Dr. in the apartment complex.

THE PAIR was taken to the hospital by the Hoffman Estates Fire Protection District ambulance.

Firemen said that Escamille had only been struck by the falling dirt when the cave-in occurred. He was able to free himself from the ditch where the two men were digging a sewer line.

Sisfuentes however was completely buried by the cave-in. Fellow workers labored to free him and firemen said his body was completely uncovered when they arrived on the scene.

Police Win Four Pistol Trophies

The Elk Grove Village police pistol team won four team trophies at the first invitational pistol match at the village's new pistol shooting range, sponsored by the local Fraternal Order of Police (FOP).

The match, held two weekends in September and October, was attended by some 450 individuals and 100 teams from Illinois, Wisconsin and Indiana.

Elk Grove Village Detective Richard Rusch, secretary of the shooting commission of the FOP, said his organization plans to make the pistol match an annual event.

weekend, signed by the Republican and Democratic canvassers in each precinct. The canvassers are selected by precinct committeemen, and serve as judges on election days.

Palatine Township Clerk Ruth Ellen Blowney said canvassers are supposed to verify that persons listed on the registration rolls are still eligible to vote.

Thefts Reported At Construction Site

Two thefts from the same construction site in Elk Grove Village were reported Friday. Parts worth about $185 from a two-way radio in a truck belonging to Spooner and Son Excavating Co. were stolen. Also stolen were two tires and a gasoline tank from a forklift at the construction site. Estimated value of these items was $250.

'Name The Ponies' Winners Listed

Mike Leigh, 13, of 825 D Jefferson Sq. and Sheryl Louko, 14, of 231 Clearmont Ln. are the winners of the Bank of Elk Grove's "Name the Ponies" contest.

Each will receive a $10 savings account from the bank.

Sophia Hausen, director of public relations for the bank, said that Mike's choice of "Sassy" and Sheryl's selection of "Dopey" were judged the best names submitted for the two ponies.

The ponies were purchased by the bank and donated to the Elk Grove Park District. The ponies will pull a small, covered wagon to be used by the park district to give children rides.

Blowney said, or a final notice will be sent by mail informing the person that unless he appears at the county office, his registration will be cancelled.

In many cases, however, the pink slips were not received, or were received after the final notice, she said.

Palatine village officials are making available form letters for qualified voters who received notices of disenfranchisement. The forms are available at village hall, 54 S. Brockway St.

Burglary Reported

Cash and belongings worth a total of $1,500 were taken sometime Friday morning from a home at 11 Cosman Rd., Elk Grove Village. Thieves took a portable television, a radio, two cameras, a typewriter and tape recorder. They also stole $600 in cash. Police said the thieves broke into the home through the laundry room.

Park District Will Start Bridge Club

An organizational meeting for anyone interested in joining a bridge club, sponsored by the Elk Grove Park District, will be held at 8 p.m., Thursday, in Lions Park Community Center, 180 Kennedy Blvd.

Club membership is open to anyone wanting to play bridge, at any level of skill. The club will meet one Thursday evening each month.

Village Officials' Salaries Highest In 2 Categories

by LYNN ASINOF

In a Herald survey of salaries paid to officials in nine Northwest suburban villages, Wheeling ranked highest paid in two comparable categories.

Although the figures can only be used as a rough comparison because of some variations in seniority and responsibility, they do provide a general guideline to salary scales.

In Wheeling, William Bleber, director of building and zoning, is currently earning a salary of $19,000. The average salary for this position in the villages surveyed is $16,061. Salaries range from $13,399.88 in Hoffman Estates to $18,900 in Mount Prospect.

ONLY FOUR VILLAGES surveyed have either an administrative assistant or an assistant village manager. Salaries in this category range from $19,000 in Wheeling to $7,000 in Palatine, with an average of $12,625. Roger Stricker, who fills the position in Wheeling, also serves as director of public safety.

Wheeling is one of four villages surveyed that pays fire and police chiefs the same salary. In the other five villages, the police chief is paid more in three communities, while the fire chief is paid more in two.

The highest paid chiefs are in Arlington Heights, with the fire chief at a salary of $19,000 and the police chief at $20,200. The lowest-paid fire chief is in Schaumburg, with a salary of $15,000, and the lowest-paid police chief is in Rolling Meadows with a salary of $17,240.

IN WHEELING, the fire chief and police chief are each paid $18,000 a year. However, two police chiefs' salaries are currently being paid — one to Chief M. O. Horcher, on leave of absence due to illness, and one to Capt. Peter Gutilla, who is acting police chief.

Salaries for village managers range from $17,000 in Buffalo Grove to $33,000 in Arlington Heights, with an average of $24,264. In Wheeling, Village Mgr. George Passolt makes $24,000. Passolt's duties, however, include those of financial director, which is a separate paid position in six of the towns surveyed.

Finance directors' salaries range from $25 a month in Buffalo Grove, where it is a part-time position, to $19,425 in Elk Grove Village.

IN WHEELING, Larry Oppenheimer serves as director of public works and village engineer. He receives $24,000 a year.

In four of the towns surveyed there is a village engineer. He receives $24,000 a year for this position in Palatine and Rolling Meadows contract with a private firm for engineering.

Hoffman Estates, like Wheeling, has its engineering done by the director of public works, who receives a salary of $20,000. In Hoffman Estates, however, the public works department does not include the street or the water department as it does in Wheeling.

Village presidents receive salaries ranging from $3,000 in Wheeling to $1,800 in Buffalo Grove, with an average salary of $2,242.

Ogilvie Gives Hard Sell On School Funds

Gov. Richard Ogilvie gave his proposals for increasing the funding of Illinois schools the hard sell last night to a meeting of school principals, but soft-pedaled his proposal to freeze real estate property taxes.

Speaking at the Illinois Principals' Association conference at Arlington Park Towers in Arlington Heights, the governor detailed the school financing proposals he will make to a special session of the General Assembly, but barely touched on the tax freeze proposal he will also make.

Earlier in the day, Ogilvie had told a press conference he is calling a special session of the legislature for late November. He said he will ask the legislators to freeze property taxes and allocate the state's $100 million in revenue sharing monies to schools.

Without spelling out his tax plan to the principals, Ogilvie said he had proposed to "provide the first real tax relief in Illinois history."

HE ADDED, "The real key to tax relief is careful attention to the needs of Illinois schools. I will not sacrifice quality education on the altar of political expediency."

In addition to making the "lion's share" of the state's revenue sharing money available to schools, Ogilvie said, "We can make it possible for the cities, counties and township governments which will receive $200 million to make some of their money available for schools where local conditions warrant."

Ogilvie received the warmest response of his half hour speech when he told the group, "We in Springfield are prepared to offer every conceivable form of technical, financial and manpower assistance, but we have no intention of imposing our decisions as long as I'm governor on those of you who are on the firing line."

The governor also said that during his term Illinois has gone from 47th in state support of education to 26th. In a veiled swipe at his Democratic opponent Dan Walker, he added, "That is hardly the record of neglect that some people have tried to portray."

In what appeared to be another reference to Walker, the governor said, "Everyone's for better schools and now that motherhood and the flag are somewhat suspect in certain quarters, better schools may be the only thing left for political rhetoric. But it's not enough to be for better schools. What we need is a record of concern and of strong commitment."

Ann Matasar To Speak At Last Of Public Forums

Ann Matasar, Democratic candidate for state senator for the 1st District, will moderate the last of three public forums

Sunday in the Kendall College Auditorium, 2408 Orrington Ave., Evanston.

Discussing the topic, "Human Rights — Will Women in Government Make a Difference?" will be panelists Midge Miller of the Wisconsin State Legislature, Lois Wille of the Chicago Daily News, Harold Visotsky, Chairman of the Department of Psychiatry, Northwestern Medical School, and Sylvia Cotton of the Day Care Crisis Council of the Chicago Area and board member of the National Council of Jewish Women, Chicago sector.

A question and answer period will follow the discussion. Mrs. Matasar and her opponent, Republican Bradley Glass of Northfield, will speak at a breakfast meeting at 9:30 a.m. Sunday at the Beth Hillel Men's Club, 3220 Big Tree, Wilmette, and will also speak at a special assembly Friday at New Trier West High School.

A candidate's night sponsored by the League of Women Voters is also planned for Oct. 25 at the Northbrook Legion Hall.

14th Oktoberfest Slated Saturday

The 14th annual Oktoberfest sponsored by the St. Mary's Athletic Association will begin at 8 p.m. Saturday in the school hall.

The party will feature dancing and sing-a-longs with the Jolly Knights German Band, and door prizes. Bratwurst and sauerkraut dinners will also be available.

Profits from the Oktoberfest are used to equip the school football, basketball and volleyball teams and the cheerleading squads.

Tickets are $3 each, and may be purchased at St. Mary's Rectory.

Today's Political Profiles

Turn To Page 8

This Morning In Brief

The State

The president of largely black Malcolm X College charged that authorities investigating the alleged "De Mau Mau" murders of nine white persons perpetrated for political reasons "the myth that black people come out of the ghetto, sweep down and kill the whites."

Ironically, Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie's call for a special legislative session on tax and school finance drew some Democratic praise and a hint of indifference from one high-ranking Republican, Senate President Pro Tem Cecil Pardee of Chicago.

A defense attorney argued that the prosecution's evidence is "wholly insufficient" to convict Cook County State's Atty. Edward V. Hanrahan and 13 co-defendants in the Black Panther police raid case.

Bernard Carey, Republican candidate for Cook County state's attorney, said he has appealed to President Nixon to station federal marshals in Chicago to prevent vote fraud in the November election.

Actress Jane Fonda, leading a group of antiwar activists speaking to Southern Illinois University's Carbondale campus said President Nixon has escalated the war and that Sen. George McGovern could end it.

The Nation

A small army of police fanned out through Brooklyn and three suburban counties, carrying subpoenas for 577 persons linked with an "organized crime headquarters" which had been under surveillance for a year. A district attorney said the headquarters was in a trailer in an automobile junkyard.

The Supreme Court voted 7-2 to refuse another legal effort to have the Vietnam War declared unconstitutional.

President Nixon made an unscheduled visit to a convention of families of American POWs and promised that "under no circumstances" would the men be abandoned. He also said their men had paid too high a price in Vietnam for him to grant amnesty to those who refused to serve there.

The World

Dynamiters blew up railway tracks and riot police smashed locks on downtown stores that defied an army order to open during nationwide strikes which have crippled Chile. Chile's top Communist official said a "revolt" was under way. While police smashed the locks, hundreds of demonstrators screamed, "Chile is and always will be a land of liberty."

The War

Heavy fighting erupted in the war-scarred mountain jungles outside of Hue, while far to the south, Vietnamese government troops reopened a major highway into Saigon. U.S. planes battered an airfield far north of Hanoi. Three American aircraft were reported lost in operations elsewhere in Indochina.

The Market

Stock prices dropped to their lowest level since July 21 on the New York Stock Exchange as investors remained cautious. Trading was light. The Dow Jones Industrial average closed off 8.80 at 920.45, close to the July 21 reading of 920.65. Declines outnumbered advances 965 to 415 among 1,749 issues on the tape. Volume totaled 10,940,000 shares compared with 12,870,000 Friday. Prices also moved lower on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex index lost 0.11 to 25.69. Volume came to 2,260,000 shares compared with 2,400,000 on Friday.

Last Week.....

The Metropolitan Sanitary District has offered to lease a former sewage treatment plant site to the Wheeling Park District if the district will pay to have the land cleared. The district indicated the estimated $10,000 the project would cost would be too high.

After a two-week inquiry, an assistant state's attorney has concluded that Buffalo Grove Village Pres. Gary Armstrong has violated no law by accepting a management position with a developer planning to build in the community.

Negotiators for the High School Dist. 214 board and teachers resumed talks for the first time since May to agree on a 1972-73 salary contract. The closed meeting yielded no concrete developments.

Top-ranking village employees in Wheeling received substantial salary increases, according to figures released by Village Mgr. George Passolt.

Progress on the realignment of Wheeling Road at McHenry Road and Dundee

Road has been held up because Commonwealth Edison has not moved utility poles that are in the path.

The Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) and the Lake County Forest Preserve District may seek federal funds for construction of a proposed retention lake on Buffalo Creek, it was announced last week.

The Wheeling Village Board approved another step to get federally subsidized insurance for the village. Local requirements have been met, and the program now needs approval by a local coordinator and HUD.

Several Buffalo Grove residents attended a village plan commission meeting to hear plans for two new Levitt & Sons developments north of Mundelein Road.

A temporary traffic signal was installed at the west intersection of Dundee and Arlington Heights roads to control traffic until a permanent fixture is installed.

Hundreds Watch Parade, Attend Oktoberfest

Despite chilly weather, hundreds turned out for Sunday's fire prevention parade and Oktoberfest in Prospect Heights.

Sunday's events climaxed a week of fire prevention activities sponsored by the Prospect Heights Volunteer Fire Department. That included the Miss Fire Prevention competition, a school poster contest and a dance. The Oktoberfest was held at the shopping center at Rte. 83 and Camp McDonald Road.

Sunday's parade began about 12:30 p.m. and included the Wheeling High School band, firefighting equipment from three departments, several floats and decorated bicycles.

Wheeling Officials Will Be 'Models'

Several Wheeling officials will display their fashion talents Wednesday night when they serve as escorts at the Ladies of the Lions fashion show-fund raiser at the Hartmann House, 393 S. Milwaukee Ave.

Village Pres. Ted Scanlon, Trustee Michael Valenza, Village Atty. Paul Hammer, local policemen and others will escort club members while modeling clothing ranging from casual to evening wear.

Prior to "Fashions ala Mode," there will be a cocktail hour starting at 6 p.m. and dinner starting at 8 p.m. The fashion show will begin at 9 p.m.

Proceeds from the Ladies of the Lions only fund-raiser will be used to aid the blind, the handicapped and the community. Tickets at $5 each are available at the door.

Fashions for the show are being provided by Leonard's Men and Boys Ltd. and Fashions by Jane, both of Northbrook.

Candidates running for state offices in the Prospect Heights area were given a chance to address the audience. Those at the Oktoberfest included Bradley Glass, Republican candidate for First District Senator; Brian Duff and John Porter, Republican candidates for state representative from the First District; Donald Norman one of two Democratic candidates for the First District representative posts; Robert Juckett and Eugene Schlickman, Republican candidates for representative in the Fourth District; Aaron Jaffe, Democrat candidate for Fourth District representative; and Democrat Tom Flynn and Republican John Nimrod, candidates for Fourth District senator.

Also at Sunday's Oktoberfest, local artists displayed their wares, and a rock band provided music later in the afternoon.

The Oktoberfest was sponsored by the Prospect Heights Improvement Association.

by TONI GINETTI

If you have kids at home, please don't let them see this. I'd hate to be the one blamed for spoiling a sacred childhood belief.

I've just found out that Santa Claus gets paid. That's right, he gets paid for giving presents and spreading good cheer at Christmas time. Not only that, he gets paid pretty well in my opinion, $3 an hour!

At least that's what he makes at Woodfield. I found that out when I noticed an ad in the job section advertising for a Santa Claus for the mall. What does it take to be Santa Claus?

"A fat man with a deep voice," said Jerry Dempsey, with a laugh. He is the man at Woodfield who will decide this week who will be the mall's Santa. "Seriously, though, it's one of the hardest things to do all year. We never anticipate a smooth-running operation."

DEMPSEY EXPLAINED this was so because, as terrible as this may sound, being Santa is "the toughest, most physically draining and mentally mind-bending experience there is. It's worse than digging ditches!"

"You have to realize 'Santa' has to pick up just about every child, and that amounts sometimes to a child a minute. The complaints at the end of the day are always of stiff arms and sore backs, as if they were chopping wood all day," he said.

In fact, Dempsey said, the job is so demanding that it's just too much for one person to handle. Santa's 70-hour work week will be manned in shifts by six persons. Incidentally, women need not apply because, while Dempsey said he'd be willing to talk to a girl if she came in for the job, "we try to stick to the traditional kind of concept of Santa that will come across best psychologically for the kids."

He's got a point there. But sometimes outside appearances might not tell the true story of a person's qualifications for a job like Santa's. Take, for example, what might happen if one of the some 15 applicants Dempsey interviews this week was the real (yes, Virginia) Santa. A standard job interview might not turn out too well . . .

"I saw your ad in the paper for Santa Claus, so I thought I'd come down and find out what you wanted," Santa might say.

"I TAKE IT you'd like to apply for a job as Santa," the interviewer asks.

"Not AS Santa, I AM Santa."

"I see," the interviewer says, trying to humor him. "Your name is Santa Claus?"

"No, my name is Christopher Kringle, but many children prefer to call me Santa or St. Nicholas."

"Is that so," the interviewer answers cautiously. "All right Mr. Kringle, let's just fill out this application. Do you live in the neighborhood?"

"NO, I LIVE in the North Pole."

"And how would you get to work each day?"

"Well I have this team of eight tiny reindeer who can fly my sleigh here in no time."

The interviewer wipes his brow and then asks, "I'll need some references and information on past job experience."

"For the past 100 years I've worked one night a year delivering toys to good children all over the world," he answers. "The rest of the time I supervise the work at my toy factory."

"Then you're self-employed."

"YOU MIGHT SAY that. As for a reference, you could put Mr. Clement Moore."

"And what is your relation to Mr. Moore?"

"Oh, he's just a friend. I visited him one Christmas Eve and he wrote a poem about me."

"One last question, Mr. Kringle, do you have any dependents?"

"Oh, yes, 150 elves."

"I DON'T KNOW whether the IRS will allow that many," the interviewer answers nervously.

"Well, that's okay, I wouldn't want to cause any trouble," Santa answers as he rises from his chair. "If that's all the questions, may I ask when I start the job?"

"Let me put it this way, Mr. Kringle, don't call us, we'll call you."

Thousands Must Prove Voter Eligibility

Thousands of registered voters in the Northwest suburbs have been challenged to prove their eligibility, or be unable to vote in the Nov. 7 general elections.

The widespread distribution of notices informing voters "to show cause why registration to vote should not be canceled" apparently stems from the efforts of overzealous canvassers attempting to remove from registration rolls persons who have changed their names, moved or died.

A spokesman for the election department in the Cook County clerk's office said voters who received the notices but who have not changed their names or addresses can disregard the stipulation that they appear in person before the Board of Revision in Chicago yesterday or today.

To remain registered, however, voters who received the notice must mail it to the board's office, Room 402, County

Building, 188 N. Clark St., Chicago, by the end of this week.

The notice should be signed attesting to the voter's eligibility but need not be notarized, the spokesman said.

THE CLERK'S office on Monday was deluged with "millions of calls from all over," according to the spokesman.

The distribution of registration cancellation warnings apparently was not politically motivated. In many cases, newly registered voters received the notices. In some cases, persons who have lived at the same addresses for 15 years were challenged. And in other instances some members of a family were challenged and not others.

"What are they trying to do," said one Palatine village trustee, — disenfranchise everyone?"

The notices were distributed over the weekend, signed by the Republican and Democratic canvassers in each precinct.

The canvassers are selected by precinct committeemen, and serve as judges on election days.

Palatine Township Clerk Ruth Ellen Blowney said canvassers are supposed to verify that persons listed on the registration rolls are still eligible to vote.

In cases where an individual is not at home when the canvassers arrive, they are to leave a pink slip asking the person to contact them within 48 hours, Mrs. Blowney said, or a final notice will be sent by mail informing the person that unless he appears at the county office, his registration will be cancelled.

In many cases, however, the pink slips were not received, or were received after the final notice, she said.

Palatine village officials are making available form letters for qualified voters who received notices of disenfranchisement. The forms are available at village hall, 54 S. Brockway St.

Village Approves 3-Year Rabies Vaccination Law

Despite the objections of Dr. David Saidel, chairman of the Buffalo Grove Board of Health, and a veterinarian, the village animal ordinance has been amended to allow three-year rabies vaccinations for dogs as an option to the one-year inoculation now required.

The village board voted last week to adopt an amendment to the current animal ordinance, recognizing the validity of a three-year vaccination program approved by the state about a year and a half ago.

After much discussion, the Board of Health ended in a 2-2 tie vote on the question of recommending the proposed amendment for adoption. Two board members were absent. The unresolved issue then went to the village board for final consideration.

The trustees present approved the amendment unanimously. Village President Gary Armstrong and village trustee Jim Shirley were absent. Saidel did not attend the meeting.

TRUSTEE TOM MAHONEY requested at the meeting that a workshop session be conducted as soon as possible to discuss the practicality of hiring a full-time service officer to enforce the animal ordinance, and the possibility of requiring other animals to be licensed.

Saidel, chairman of the Buffalo Grove Board of Health and a local veterinarian, said he is afraid residents will forget to have their dogs immunized every three years.

"It's not that the program doesn't work — it does," Saidel said, "but we're dealing with human nature, and some people have a tendency to be very lax."

The animal ordinance requires proof of either a one-year or three-year vaccination for dogs and an annual vaccination for cats before the owner can purchase a license. Presently, there is no three-year vaccination for cats.

Saidel said he sends reminders to owners who have had their pet immunized at his office when it is time for the pet to be revaccinated, but he said the only way to determine accurately if all animals in the village have been properly immunized would be to conduct a house-to-house survey.

"I'm not a policeman," Saidel said, "all I can do is send the reminders, I can't force somebody to come in if he doesn't want to."

SAIDEL SAID when people come to his office for a rabies vaccination for their dog, he gives them a choice between the one-year and three-year inoculation. However, he said he usually recommends the one-year vaccine.

"Very few of my good clients will go for the three-year program," Saidel said.

To allay critics who might charge that Saidel objects to the three-year program because it would hurt him financially, Saidel says, "I have an established practice — I don't rely on rabies vaccinations."

Saidel said that in a relatively rural area such as Buffalo Grove there is also greater chance of pets coming into contact with wild animals — particularly skunks. The risk of forgetting a vaccination on a three-year program increases the danger of rabies, he said.

Ogilvie Gives Hard Sell On School Funds

Gov. Richard Ogilvie gave his proposals for increasing the funding of Illinois schools the hard sell last night to a meeting of school principals, but soft-pedaled his proposal to freeze real estate property taxes.

Speaking at the Illinois Principals' Association conference at Arlington Park Towers in Arlington Heights, the governor detailed the school financing proposals he will make to a special session of the General Assembly, but barely touched on the tax freeze proposal he will also make.

Earlier in the day, Ogilvie had told a press conference he is calling a special session of the legislature for late November. He said he will ask the legislators to freeze property taxes and allocate the state's $100 million in revenue sharing monies to schools.

Without spelling out his tax plan to the principals, Ogilvie said he had proposed to "provide the first real tax relief in Illinois history."

HE ADDED, "The real key to tax relief is careful attention to the needs of Illinois schools. I will not sacrifice quality education on the altar of political expediency."

In addition to making the "lion's share" of the state's revenue sharing money available to schools, Ogilvie said, "We can make it possible for the cities, counties and township governments which will receive $200 million to make some of their money available for schools where local conditions warrant."

Ogilvie received the warmest response of his half hour speech when he told the group, "We in Springfield are prepared to offer every conceivable form of technical, financial and manpower assistance, but we have no intention of imposing our decisions as long as I'm governor on those of you who are on the firing line."

The governor also said that during his term Illinois has gone from 47th in state support of education to 26th. In a veiled swipe at his Democratic opponent Dan Walker, he added, "That is hardly the record of neglect that some people have tried to portray."

In what appeared to be another reference to Walker, the governor said, "Everyone's for better schools and now that motherhood and the flag are somewhat suspect in certain quarters, better schools may be the only thing left for political rhetoric. But it's not enough to be for better schools. What we need is a record of concern and of strong commitment."

Teacher Of First Aid Saves A Life

by STEVE BROWN

The old adage, "practice what you preach" has been around for many years, but for one Schaumburg resident the familiar saying took on much more meaning recently.

Ken Dopp, a jack of all trades in the area, had just finished teaching an American Red Cross first aid class at Fremd High School in Palatine and was on his way home when he witnessed a serious auto accident.

Dopp rushed to the assistance of one of the injured persons and began to administer first aid procedures.

"I found myself hard-pressed to follow my own teaching," Dopp explained. He added just minutes before the crash he had concluded a class on first aid theory.

"ONE OF THE MOST important elements is to gain the confidence of the patient, and this was a real test," Dopp said.

He admitted that scene was not a pretty one and that he felt a little "squeamish" when he first arrived at the scene.

Dopp said that within minutes several Lake County police officers and an ambulance unit from the Lake Zurich Fire Department arrived.

"It was beautiful to see five strangers, all with training, instantaneously operate as a team," Dopp remarked. He said the quick work enabled the man to reach emergency treatment much quicker.

He also said the incident brings home the need and importance of first aid training. Dopp said in most cases the only people to take the training are those required by law to do so.

"THIS IS SOMETHING that everyone should know, because you never know what situation you might become involved in," Dopp explained.

An environmental technician for the Palatine Health Department, Dopp finds the time to teach the first aid class several nights each week.

"It is incidents like this that make me glad that I am prepared to help out and I think that everyone should take the time to get the training," Dopp said.

Buffalo Grove Mall Art Fair Planned

A group of 60 artists and craftsmen will exhibit art work in all media at the third annual indoor art fair scheduled for Saturday, Nov. 4, and Sunday, Nov. 5, at the Buffalo Grove Mall.

The show, sponsored by the Buffalo Grove Merchants Association, will be open from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday. There is no admission charge.

Exhibitors scheduled to participate in the fair are from the Chicago area, Wisconsin and Indiana. Some are beginning young artists, while others are professionals who have been exhibiting and selling work for many years. Several artists who have exhibited their work in past Buffalo Grove Mall art fairs are returning this year.

As in the past, exhibitors will be competing for cash prizes and honorable mention ribbons totaling $100.

Local artists who are set to show their work include Barbara Sharp, paintings, Barbara Willeumier, pottery; Judith Ann Cleator, watercolors and drawings, and Ted Uskali Sr., paintings.

Today's Political Profiles

Turn To Page 8

This Morning In Brief

The State

The president of largely black Malcolm X College charged that authorities investigating the alleged "De Mau Mau" murders of nine white persons perpetrated for political reasons "the myth that black people come out of the ghetto, sweep down and kill the whites."

Ironically, Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie's call for a special legislative session on tax and school finance drew some Democratic praise and a hint of indifference from one high-ranking Republican, Senate President Pro Tem Cecil Pardee of Chicago.

A defense attorney argued that the prosecution's evidence is "wholly insufficient" to convict Cook County State's Atty. Edward V. Hanrahan and 13 co-defendants in the Black Panther police raid case.

Bernard Carey, Republican candidate for Cook County state's attorney, said he has appealed to President Nixon to station federal marshals in Chicago to prevent vote fraud in the November election.

Actress Jane Fonda, leading a group of antiwar activists speaking to Southern Illinois University's Carbondale campus said President Nixon has escalated the war and that Sen. George McGovern could end it.

The Nation

A small army of police fanned out through Brooklyn and three suburban counties, carrying subpoenas for 677 persons linked with an "organized crime headquarters" which had been under surveillance for a year. A district attorney said the headquarters was in a trailer in an automobile junkyard.

The Supreme Court voted 7-2 to refuse another legal effort to have the Vietnam War declared unconstitutional.

President Nixon made an unscheduled visit to a convention of families of American POWs and promised that "under no circumstances" would the men be abandoned. He also said their men had paid too high a price in Vietnam for him to grant amnesty to those who refused to serve there.

The World

Dynamiters blew up railway tracks and riot police smashed locks on downtown stores that defied an army order to open during nationwide strikes which have crippled Chile. Chile's top Communist official said a "revolt" was under way. While police smashed the locks, hundreds of demonstrators screamed, "Chile is and always will be a land of liberty."

The War

Heavy fighting erupted in the war-scarred mountain jungles outside of Hue, while far to the south, Vietnamese government troops reopened a major highway into Saigon. U.S. planes battered an airfield far north of Hanoi. Three American aircraft were reported lost in operations elsewhere in Indochina.

The Weather

The Market

Stock prices dropped to their lowest level since July 21 on the New York Stock Exchange as investors remained cautious. Trading was light. The Dow Jones industrial average closed off 8.80 at 921.66, close to the July 21 reading of 920.45. Declines outnumbered advances 985 to 415 among 1,749 issues on the tape. Volume totaled 10,940,000 shares compared with 12,870,000 Friday. Prices also moved lower on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex index lost 0.11 to 25.59. Volume came to 2,260,000 shares compared with 2,400,000 on Friday.

The Metropolitan Sanitary District has offered to lease a former sewage treatment plant site to the Wheeling Park District if the district will pay to have the land cleared. The district indicated the estimated $10,000 the project would cost would be too high.

After a two-week inquiry, an assistant state's attorney has concluded that Buffalo Grove Village Pres. Gary Armstrong has violated no law by accepting a management position with a developer planning to build in the community.

Negotiators for the High School Dist. 214 board and teachers resumed talks for the first time since May to agree on a 1972-73 salary contract. The closed meeting yielded no concrete developments.

Top-ranking village employees in Wheeling received substantial salary increases, according to figures released by Village Mgr. George Passolt.

Progress on the realignment of Wheeling Road at McHenry Road and Dundee

The Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) and the Lake County Forest Preserve District may seek federal funds for construction of a proposed retention lake on Buffalo Creek, it was announced last week.

The Wheeling Village Board approved another step to get federally subsidized insurance for the village. Local requirements have been met, and the program now needs approval by a local coordinator and HUD.

Several Buffalo Grove residents attended a village plan commission meeting to hear plans for two new Levitt & Sons developments north of Mundelein Road.

A temporary traffic signal was installed at the west intersection of Dundee and Arlington Heights roads to control traffic until a permanent fixture is installed.

Hundreds Watch Parade, Attend Oktoberfest

Despite chilly weather, hundreds turned out for Sunday's fire prevention parade and Oktoberfest in Prospect Heights.

Sunday's events climaxed a week of fire prevention activities sponsored by the Prospect Heights Volunteer Fire Department, that included the Miss Fire Prevention competition, a school poster contest and a dance. The Oktoberfest was held at the shopping center at Rte. 83 and Camp McDonald Road.

Sunday's parade began about 12:30 p.m. and included the Wheeling High School band, firefighting equipment from three departments, several floats and decorated bicycles.

Wheeling Officials Will Be 'Models'

Several Wheeling officials will display their fashion talents Wednesday night when they serve as escorts at the Ladies of the Lions fashion show-fund raiser at the Hartmann House, 393 S. Milwaukee Ave.

Village Pres. Ted Scanlon, Trustee Michael Valenza, Village Atty. Paul Hammer, local policemen and others will escort club members while modeling clothing ranging from casual to evening wear.

Prior to "Fashions ala Mode," there will be a cocktail hour starting at 6 p.m. and dinner starting at 8 p.m. The fashion show will begin at 9 p.m.

Proceeds from the Ladies of the Lions only fund-raiser will be used to aid the blind, the handicapped and the community. Tickets at $8 each are available at the door.

Fashions for the show are being provided by Leonard's Men and Boys Ltd. and Fashions by Jane, both of Northbrook.

Candidates running for state offices in the Prospect Heights area were given a chance to address the audience. Those at the Oktoberfest included Bradley Glass, Republican candidate for First District Senator; Brian Duff and John Porter, Republican candidates for state representative from the First District; Donald Norman one of two Democratic candidates for the First District representative posts; Robert Juckett and Eugene Schlickman, Republican candidates for representative in the Fourth District; Aaron Jaffe, Democrat candidate for Fourth District representative; and Democrat Tom Flynn and Republican John Nimrod, candidates for Fourth District senator.

Also at Sunday's Oktoberfest, local artists displayed their wares, and a rock band provided music later in the afternoon.

The Oktoberfest was sponsored by the Prospect Heights Improvement Association.

by TONI GINETTI

If you have kids at home, please don't let them see this. I'd hate to be the one blamed for spoiling a sacred childhood belief.

I've just found out that Santa Claus gets paid. That's right, he gets paid for giving presents and spreading good cheer at Christmas time. Not only that, he gets paid pretty well in my opinion, $3 an hour!

At least that's what he makes at Woodfield. I found that out when I noticed an ad in the job section advertising for a Santa Claus for the mall. What does it take to be Santa Claus?

"A fat man with a deep voice," said Jerry Dempsey, with a laugh. He is the man at Woodfield who will decide this week who will be the mall's Santa. "Seriously, though, it's one of the hardest things to do all year. We never anticipate a smooth-running operation."

DEMPSEY EXPLAINED this was so because, as terrible as this may sound, being Santa is "the toughest, most physically draining and mentally mind-bending experience there is. It's worse than digging ditches!"

"You have to realize 'Santa' has to pick up just about every child, and that amounts sometimes to a child a minute. The complaints at the end of the day are always of stiff arms and sore backs, as if they were chopping wood all day," he said.

In fact, Dempsey said, the job is so demanding that it's just too much for one person to handle. Santa's 70-hour work week will be manned in shifts by six persons. Incidentally, women need not apply because, while Dempsey said he'd be willing to talk to a girl if she came in for the job, "we try to stick to the traditional kind of concept of Santa that will come across best psychologically for the kids."

He's got a point there. But sometimes outside appearances might not tell the true story of a person's qualifications for a job like Santa's. Take, for example, what might happen if one of the some 15 applicants Dempsey interviews this week was the real (yes, Virginia) Santa. A standard job interview might not turn out too well.

"I saw your ad in the paper for Santa Claus, so I thought I'd come down and find out what you wanted," Santa might say.

"I TAKE IT you'd like to apply for a job as Santa," the interviewer asks.

"Not AS Santa, I AM Santa."

"I see," the interviewer says, trying to humor him. "Your name is Santa Claus?"

"No, my name is Christopher Kringle, but many children prefer to call me Santa or St. Nicholas."

"Is that so," the interviewer answers cautiously. "All right Mr. Kringle, let's just fill out this application. Do you live in the neighborhood?"

"NO, I LIVE in the North Pole."

"And how would you get to work each day?"

"Well I have this team of eight tiny reindeer who can fly my sleigh here in no time."

The interviewer wipes his brow and then asks, "I'll need some references and information on past job experience."

"For the past 100 years I've worked one night a year delivering toys to good children all over the world," he answers.

"The rest of the time I supervise the work at my toy factory."

"Then you're self-employed."

"YOU MIGHT SAY THAT. As for a reference, you could put Mr. Clement Moore."

"And what is your relation to Mr. Moore?"

"Oh, he's just a friend. I visited him one Christmas Eve and he wrote a poem about me."

"One last question, Mr. Kringle, do you have any dependents?"

"Oh, yes, 150 elves."

"I DON'T KNOW whether the IRS will allow that many," the interviewer answers nervously.

"Well, that's okay. I wouldn't want to cause any trouble," Santa answers as he rises from his chair. "If that's all the questions, may I ask when I start the job?"

"Let me put it this way, Mr. Kringle, don't call us, we'll call you."

Thousands Must Prove Voter Eligibility

Thousands of registered voters in the Northwest suburbs have been challenged to prove their eligibility, or be unable to vote in the Nov. 7 general elections.

The widespread distribution of notices informing voters "to show cause why registration to vote should not be canceled" apparently stems from the efforts of overzealous canvassers attempting to remove from registration rolls persons who have changed their names, moved or died.

A spokesman for the election department in the Cook County clerk's office said voters who received the notices but who have not changed their names or addresses can disregard the stipulation that they appear in person before the Board of Revision in Chicago yesterday or today.

To remain registered, however, voters who received the notice must mail it to the board's office, Room 402, County

Building, 188 N. Clark St., Chicago, by the end of this week.

The notice should be signed attesting to the voter's eligibility but need not be notarized, the spokesman said.

THE CLERK'S office on Monday was deluged with "millions of calls from all over," according to the spokesman.

The distribution of registration cancellation warnings apparently was not politically motivated. In many cases, newly registered voters received the notices. In some cases, persons who have lived at the same addresses for 15 years were challenged. And in other instances some members of a family were challenged and not others.

"What are they trying to do," said one Palatine village trustee, — disenfranchise everyone?"

The notices were distributed over the weekend, signed by the Republican and Democratic canvassers in each precinct.

The canvassers are selected by precinct committeemen, and serve as judges on election days.

Palatine Township Clerk Ruth Ellen Blowney said canvassers are supposed to verify that persons listed on the registration rolls are still eligible to vote.

In cases where an individual is not at home when the canvassers arrive, they are to leave a pink slip asking the person to contact them within 48 hours. Mrs. Blowney said, or a final notice will be sent by mail informing the person that unless he appears at the county office, his registration will be cancelled.

In many cases, however, the pink slips were not received, or were received after the final notice, she said.

Palatine village officials are making available form letters for qualified voters who received notices of disenfranchisement. The forms are available at village hall, 54 S. Brockway St.

Dist. 15 boys and girls compete in cross country.

Cross-Country
Attracts 150

Almost 150 students have gone out for interscholastic cross-country at the four junior high schools in Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15.
Twenty per cent of the runners are girls.
Mrs. Lois Dohra, department chairman of physical education, said this is the first year for cross-country in the district. Since there isn't a girls' team it was decided to let the girls train and compete with the boys.
"I thought there would be a big turnout of girls but I thought most of them would drop out after a few days. I have really been surprised with how many stuck with it," said Mrs. Dohra.
"It's a heck of a lot for the girls to stick with, or anyone for that matter," she added.
The teams practice after school running an average of five to ten miles each day.
Each of the teams will compete in at least five meets and the season will end with a district meet at Gray M. Sanborn School in Palatine on Oct. 31.
To date none of the girls have taken first place but some of them have been placing in the events, according to Mrs. Dohra.

This Morning In Brief

The State

The president of largely black Malcolm X College charged that authorities investigating the alleged "De Mau Mau" murders of nine white persons perpetrated for political reasons "the myth that black people come out of the ghetto, sweep down and kill the whites."
Ironically, Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie's call for a special legislative session on tax and school finance drew some Democratic praise and a hint of indifference from one high-ranking Republican, Senate President Pro Tem Cecil Pardee of Chicago.
A defense attorney argued that the prosecution's evidence is "wholly insufficient" to convict Cook County State's Atty. Edward V. Hanrahan and 13 co-defendants in the Black Panther police raid case.

Bernard Carey, Republican candidate for Cook County state's attorney, said he has appealed to President Nixon to station federal marshals in Chicago to prevent vote fraud in the November election.
Actress Jane Fonda, leading a group of antiwar activists speaking to Southern Illinois University's Carbondale campus said President Nixon has escalated the war and that Sen. George McGovern could end it.

The Nation

A small army of police fanned out through Brooklyn and three suburban counties, carrying subpoenas for 677 persons linked with an "organized crime headquarters" which had been under surveillance for a year. A district attorney said the headquarters was in a trailer in an automobile junkyard.
The Supreme Court voted 7-2 to refuse another legal effort to have the Vietnam War declared unconstitutional.
President Nixon made an unscheduled visit to a convention of families of American POWs and promised that "under no circumstances" would the men be abandoned. He also said their men had paid too high a price in Vietnam for him to grant amnesty to those who refused to serve there.

The World

Dynamiters blew up railway tracks and riot police smashed locks on downtown stores that defied an army order to open during nationwide strikes which have crippled Chile. Chile's top Communist official said a "revolt" was under way. While police smashed the locks, hundreds of demonstrators screamed, "Chile is and always will be a land of liberty."

The War

Heavy fighting erupted in the war-scarred mountain jungles outside of Hue, while far to the south, Vietnamese government troops reopened a major highway into Saigon. U.S. planes battered an airfield far north of Hanoi. Three American aircraft were reported lost in operations elsewhere in Indochina.

Palatine Library Board Fires Attorney

The Palatine Public Library Board voted unanimously last night to fire their current attorney Austin Zimmerman, after what library officials term an unimpressive presentation he made to village officials concerning a proposed library site.

Their displeasure with Zimmerman's performance was equalled by their feeling towards village officials who have rejected two proposed sites and may do the same for a third site on Northwest Highway.

Any site the library board chooses must be approved by the village board. Two sites already have been rejected by the village after the library directors had settled on the locations.

A disgruntled library board faced the possibility of a third rejection last night. The most recent site is several blocks north of the Palatine downtown business area, a fact that is causing village trustees to balk at approval.

Palatine village officials want a downtown location at a reasonable cost, a combination that is impossible, library board members say.

The first two sites, both near downtown Palatine, were labeled too expensive by village board standards.

Land currently being considered is on Northwest Highway between Benton Street and Plum Grove Road as part of a seven-acre office-shopping complex. Rezoning is necessary to build the complex, and the Palatine Plan Commission is considering that zoning change tonight.

According to standards issued by the Illinois Library Association (ILA) Palatine's library is lacking in two important areas, facilities and number of books. The ILA report states that a library in a town the size of Palatine should have facilities with 21,000 square feet of floor space. The current library, a remodeled home at 149 N. Brockway St., has less than half that space, 10,000 square feet.

Largely because of that lack of space, the number of volumes is below ILA standards, according to library officials.

By the ILA recommendations, Palatine should have 3½ books for each person in the village. This would equal 98,000 volumes, but only 49,000 books are in the library today.

Ogilvie Gives Hard Sell On School Funds

Gov. Richard Ogilvie gave his proposals for increasing the funding of Illinois schools the hard sell last night to a meeting of school principals, but soft-pedaled his proposal to freeze real estate property taxes.

Speaking at the Illinois Principals' Association conference at Arlington Park

Towers in Arlington Heights, the governor detailed the school financing proposals he will make to a special session of the General Assembly, but barely touched on the tax freeze proposal he will also make.

Earlier in the day, Ogilvie had told a press conference he is calling a special session of the legislature for late November. He said he will ask the legislators to freeze property taxes and allocate the state's $100 million in revenue sharing monies to schools.

Without spelling out his tax plan to the principals, Ogilvie said he had proposed to "provide the first real tax relief in Illinois history."

HE ADDED, "The real key to tax relief is careful attention to the needs of Illinois schools. I will not sacrifice quality education on the altar of political expediency."

In addition to making the "lion's share" of the state's revenue sharing money available to schools, Ogilvie said, "We can make it possible for the cities, counties and township governments which will receive $200 million to make some of their money available for schools where local conditions warrant."

Ogilvie received the warmest response of his half hour speech when he told the group, "We in Springfield are prepared to offer every conceivable form of technical, financial and manpower assistance, but we have no intention of imposing our decisions as long as I'm governor on those of you who are on the firing line."

The governor also said that during his term Illinois has gone from 47th in state support of education to 26th. In a veiled swipe at his Democratic opponent Dan Walker, he added, "That is hardly the record of neglect that some people have tried to portray."

In what appeared to be another reference to Walker, the governor said, "Everyone's for better schools and now that motherhood and the flag are somewhat suspect in certain quarters, better schools may be the only thing left for political rhetoric. But it's not enough to be for better schools. What we need is a record of concern and of strong commitment."

"YOU MIGHT SAY that. As for a reference, you could put Mr. Clement Moore."

"Oh, he's just a friend. I visited him one Christmas Eve and he wrote a poem about me."

"One last question, Mr. Kringle, do you have any dependents?"

"Oh, yes, 150 elves."

"I DON'T KNOW whether the IRS will allow that many," the interviewer answers nervously.

"Well, that's okay, I wouldn't want to cause any trouble," Santa answers as he rises from his chair. "If that's all the questions, may I ask when I start the job?"

"Let me put it this way, Mr. Kringle, don't call us, we'll call you."

ONE LITTLE pipesqueak sends Ken Shirey into the organ's core to pinpoint the culprit.

No, Lawrence Welk Isn't In Palatine—That's An Organ

by JULIA DAUER

Once a month, people up and down the quiet residential street of Carmel Drive in Palatine hear the sounds of a fullpiece orchestra come floating out of the basement of Ken and Karol Shirey's home.

That "complete orchestra" is actually a massive theatrical pipe organ which the Shireys have managed to restore to working condition over the past 10 years.

The Shirey basement is literally full of organ. The huge 1920's Wurilizer theatrical organ once provided the rumbling, wheezing, hair-raising background music for the popular silent movies in the days before the "talkies."

Today it sits in splendor in a Palatine basement.

WITH A SHIPPING date of March 26, 1928, the musical masterpiece found its first home in the Orpheum Theatre, an elegant feature at Main and Market streets in Akron, Ohio. Since that time, it has become what the Shireys call "one of the most moved theater organs in history."

When silent movies lost public favor, the organ was given to an Akron Catholic Church, where it stayed from the early 1930s to 1960 until the church gave in to progress and ordered the electronic grandson of the old pipe organ.

A friend of the Shireys in Akron bought the organ with no place to put it, so it was moved three times in the following three years without being rejuvenated.

"The Wurilizer picked up a few mouse nests, a little dirt, many nuts stored by squirrels, and some dents in the pipes, but other than that, nothing was done to it," the Shireys said.

So the Shireys bought the organ and moved it to their two-bedroom home in Akron. They moved it to their new house in Bath, Ohio, five years later, where it sat in a cathedral-ceilinged family room until 1960.

Just when they thought they were settled, Ken's company, International Business Machines, transferred him to the O'Hare office. So it was time to pack up the complex set-up for the eighth time in the history of the organ.

The Shireys aren't keeping their hobby to themselves. On the last Friday of every month, Mrs. Shirey holds open house for anyone interested in listening to or participating in the theatrical-organ era. Their basement, at least the part that isn't usurped by organ pipes, has been decorated as an old English pub, complete with checkered tablecloths.

MEMENTOES OF bygone theaters decorate the small "cafe," entertainment area in the basement. In the corner, a large bowl-shaped chandelier hangs that once adorned the Orpheum before it was torn down in 1967. On top of the organ console, two bricks that were spirited away from the Orpheum demolition site mark the dates of that theater, 1914-1967.

A five-foot gold-colored candelabra guards the entrance to the room. Above it, a golden cherub watches with hollow eyes. It's a replica of the angels that ornamented the B and K theater in Chicago, Mrs. Shirey said.

The organ player in the family is Mrs.

Shirey, but her husband, Ken, has been instrumental in the long hours of restoration required to get the organ in top shape.

Besides the organ, the Shireys have a console piano with a large player attachment that allows use of roller music. And Shirey adds his saxophone to the ensemble. Friday nights bring a drummer and other musicians from the area out to Palatine for some 1920's tunes. The open house begins "anytime after 8," Mrs. Shirey said. October's get-together, coming up Oct. 27, will be a special one, since Mrs. Shirey has a birthday to celebrate that week.

BEFORE THE October open house, the Shireys are adding to the organ and moving some of the pipes around to make room. Bellows, pipes and bells are arranged in more than half of the crammed basement. Nestled along one wall, the only non-organ equipment stands strangely out of place — a washer and dryer.

The sound produced by the organ is created when a key is pressed and air from massive bellows is raised through the desired pipe. The key sets off an electrical impulse to set off the particular magnet that allows the sound to be made.

Air pressure makes the difference between a theatrical organ and the more-common church organ. Between 7½ to 10 pounds of pressure are required by the intricate theatrical organ, while church organs usually need only 2½ to 3 pounds to operate, Mrs. Shirey said.

Besides the traditional pipes, some unique effects are possible on the Shirey organ. An authentic oo-gah horn off of a Model A blasts a warning at the touch of a foot. Bird calls, woodpeckers, rain, drums, and sirens all come alive at her whim when Mrs. Shirey hits the proper shiny chrome ball pedal.

To have an organ built like the Shirey's is today would cost an estimated $40,000 to $50,000, Mrs. Shirey said. Its shipping bill listed a purchase price of $18,000 in 1926. Minor upkeep of the maze of pipes takes about one night a week, when Shirey and a friend get together to work on the organ.

With the constant attention and repair the old musical whiz is getting, the Shirey organ may be around for another 46 years. But chances are it won't stay in Palatine. It's hard to keep the "most moved organ" in one spot for long.

Final Testimony In Land Suit Seen

Final testimony is expected this morning in the Inverness village suit to block resident Robert F. Lonz from withdrawing 40 acres of his land from the village boundaries.

Legal action by the village began in June, but actual testimony didn't start until September. Lonz's attorneys are expected to recall one or two witnesses, then both sides will present final arguments before Cook County Circuit Court Judge Helen McGillicuddy.

The hearing is set for 10:15 a.m. The village has attempted to prove that the removal of Lonz's property from the corporate limits will financially hurt Inverness and is not in keeping with village plans for the area. Lonz filed the petition to withdraw last spring, to escape strict zoning regulations and limited village water and sewer services.

Yes, Virginia, Even Santa Is Paid

by TONI GINETTI

If you have kids at home, please don't let them see this. I'd hate to be the one blamed for spoiling a sacred childhood belief.

I've just found out that Santa Claus gets paid. That's right, he gets paid for giving presents and spreading good cheer at Christmas time. Not only that, he gets paid pretty well in my opinion, $3 an hour!

At least that's what he makes at Woodfield. I found that out when I noticed an ad in the job section advertising for a Santa Claus for the mall. What does it take to be Santa Claus?

"A fat man with a deep voice," said Jerry Dempsey, with a laugh. He is the man at Woodfield who will decide this week who will be the mall's Santa. "Seriously, though, it's one of the hardest things to do all year. We never anticipate a smooth-running operation."

DEMPSEY EXPLAINED this was so because, as terrible as this may sound, being Santa is "the toughest, most physically draining and mentally mind-bending experience there is. It's worse than digging ditches!"

"You have to realize 'Santa' has to pick up just about every child, and that amounts sometimes to a child a minute. The complaints at the end of the day are always of stiff arms and sore backs, as if they were chopping wood all day," he said.

In fact, Dempsey said, the job is so demanding that it's just too much for one person to handle. Santa's 70-hour work week will be manned in shifts by six persons. Incidentally, women need not apply because, while Dempsey said he'd be willing to talk to a girl if she came in for the job, "we try to stick to the traditional kind of concept of Santa that will come across best psychologically for the kids."

He's got a point there. But sometimes outside appearances might not tell the true story of a person's qualifications for a job like Santa's. Take, for example, what might happen if one of the some 15 applicants Dempsey interviews this week was the real (yes, Virginia) Santa. A standard job interview might not turn out too well.

"I saw your ad in the paper for Santa Claus, so I thought I'd come down and find out what you wanted," Santa might say.

"I TAKE IT you'd like to apply for a job as Santa," the interviewer asks.

"Not AS Santa, I AM Santa."

"I see," the interviewer says, trying to humor him. "Your name is Santa Claus?"

"No, my name is Christopher Kringle, but many children prefer to call me Santa or St. Nicholas."

"Is that so," the interviewer answers cautiously. "All right Mr. Kringle, let's just fill out this application. Do you live in the neighborhood?"

"NO, I LIVE in the North Pole."

"And how would you get to work each day?"

"Well I have this team of eight tiny reindeer who can fly my sleigh here in no time."

The interviewer wipes his brow and then asks, "I'll need some references and information on past job experience."

"For the past 100 years I've worked one night a year delivering toys to good

Thousands Must Prove They Are Eligible To Vote

Thousands of registered voters in the Northwest suburbs have been challenged to prove their eligibility, or be unable to vote in the Nov. 7 general elections.

The widespread distribution of notices informing voters "to show cause why registration to vote should not be canceled" apparently stems from the efforts of overzealous canvassers attempting to remove from registration rolls persons who have changed their names, moved or died.

A spokesman for the election department in the Cook County clerk's office said voters who received the notices but who have not changed their names or addresses can disregard the stipulation that they appear in person before the Board of Revision in Chicago yesterday or today.

To remain registered, however, voters who received the notice must mail it to the board's office, Room 402, County Building, 188 N. Clark St., Chicago, by the end of this week.

The notice should be signed attesting to the voter's eligibility but need not be notarized, the spokesman said.

THE CLERK'S office on Monday was deluged with "millions of calls from all over," according to the spokesman.

The distribution of registration cancellation warnings apparently was not politically motivated. In many cases, newly registered voters received the notices. In some cases, persons who have lived at the same addresses for 15 years were challenged. And in other instances some members of a family were challenged and not others.

Golden Years Club Will Sponsor Bazaar

The Golden Years Club of Rolling Meadows will hold its second annual bazaar Friday and Saturday in the Rolling Meadows Shopping Mall.

All items will be hand-made. In addition to the bazaar there will be a white elephant sale and bake sale. The tables will be set up from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Friday and from 10 a.m. until everything is gone on Saturday.

Car Wash Saturday

The Senior High Fellowship of the Community Church of Rolling Meadows is holding a car wash Saturday from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. behind the church at 2720 Kirchoff.

The youths will wash cars for 99 cents. Ten per cent of the proceeds from the car wash will go to church building and maintenance.

RON DUDLEY, 12, of Rolling Meadows displays the form that helped him capture first place in the 12-year-old division of the Rolling Meadows Park District ping pong tournament on Saturday. Other winners were Lee Gray in the 10-year-old division and Randy Kusiak in the 9-year-old division.

Police Patrol Of Parks To Be Eyed

A request by the city park district to have city police assume complete patrolling of city parks is being reviewed by park officials and City Atty. Donald Rose.

Rose said recently he is checking park district ordinances to make sure the measure is compatible with park law enforcement rules.

"An ordinance already exists between the city and the park district that authorizes the city police to enforce laws on park district property," Rose said. "This would be a further elaboration of that law, but right now they're just talking about it," he added.

At a special meeting last week, the city council informally agreed to the proposal provided the matter was legally approved by Rose. The city said the arrangement would be funded on a shared cost basis, with 60 per cent coming from the park district.

BUT PARK Board Vice Pres. Robert Struggles said he will have to present the proposal to his board before the arrangement is adopted.

"We'll have to see if we have the funds and where they will come from," Struggles said. He said a breakdown of cost figures, including salaries and monthly expenses, would probably be presented to the board's policy committee at its meeting Oct. 17.

"I told Ald. William Ahrens (chairman of the council's license, police and health committee) that as soon as we discussed the matter, we would get back to the council," Struggles added.

Police Chief Lewis Case said adoption of the proposal would not create a hardship for the force.

"WE HAVE the manpower and capability to begin right away," Case repeated. "I see no problem with the legality of it, but we want to be sure our authority is incorporated into the park district ordinances," he said.

The arrangement was first proposed last week at a meeting of Ahrens' committee. Struggles said the plan was proposed in an attempt to enhance security at the parks and at the sports complex during the hockey season and special events.

In the past the district has employed a private firm to police the parks.

Struggles said the proposal would provide better security and possibly save money for the park district at the same time.

Cross-Country Attracts 150

Almost 150 students have gone out for interscholastic cross-country at the four junior high schools in Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15.

Twenty per cent of the runners are girls.

Mrs. Lois Dohra, department chairman of physical education, said this is the first year for cross-country in the district. Since there isn't a girls' team it was decided to let the girls train and compete with the boys.

"I thought there would be a big turnout of girls but I thought most of them would drop out after a few days. I have really been surprised with how many stuck with it," said Mrs. Dohra.

"It's a heck of a lot for the girls to stick with, or anyone for that matter," she added.

The teams practice after school running an average of five to ten miles each day.

Each of the teams will compete in at least five meets and the season will end with a district meet at Gray M. Sanborn School in Palatine on Oct. 31.

To date none of the girls have taken first place but some of them have been placing in the events, according to Mrs. Dohra.

Coaching the teams are Dale Milby and Frank DeRosa at Plum Grove School; Ed Kuhlert and Jim Marshall at Gray M. Sanborn School; Paul Fagot at Carl Sandburg School and David Ryan and Richard Bokor at Winston Park School.

Dist. 15 boys and girls compete in cross country.

Scouting News

Mrs. V. Wandersee, chairman of the Rolling Meadows Girl Scout Association, will leave Saturday to attend the 39th meeting of the National Council of Girl Scouts of the U.S.A. in Dallas, Tex.

Mrs. Wandersee was elected at last year's council dinner to be one of the representatives of the Girl Scout Council of Northwest Cook County. There will be approximately 5,000 delegates attending the convention which runs from Oct. 22 through Oct. 25.

There will be six items requiring action by the national council, five of which involve constitutional amendments. The one most directly concerning total membership is the proposal to reword the Girl Scout Promise and Laws. The others are as follows: the size of the national council, lowering the age limit of national council members, proxy voting, written ballot for dues change and girls as associate members of the Girl Scout movement.

Girl programs as carried out through a voluntary movement will be the main focus of the meeting. This focus will be brought out through reports and discussions on the results of the program study; emphasis on participation of girls in the creation of program and in the development of the movement; the future of voluntary movements and the resources and organization needed.

Cub Scout Pack 180 will have a paper drive on Saturday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The van will be located in the National Tea parking lot on Meadow Drive. Persons who received door hangers should place their papers on the curb for pick up. Persons unable to bring the papers to the van may call Dan Jordan at 259-2820 for pick up.

More than 40 boys accompanied by den mothers, pack leaders and parents recently walked 1 1/3 miles over the Bur Edge Nature Trail at Crabtree Nature Center.

General Time Strikers Are Confident

by TONI GINETTI

A large trailer truck hooked and the two burly men inside waved and flashed a victory sign as they passed a group of people standing outside the entrance to the General Time Corp. in Rolling Meadows.

The group consisted of members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Union (IBEW) Local 713. It was their turn to picket as part of a strike called more than two weeks ago to protest what the workers consider to be unfair wage practices by the company.

The truck drivers who passed seemed to embody the feeling of solidarity characterizing the strike. "We've been getting that all the time," one picketer laughed, referring to the truckdrivers. "They go by and when they see us they wave and honk the horn as if to let us know they're behind us," she said.

"You should have seen it the first day," another said. "The drivers would pull in and ask us what it was about and when we told them, they'd leave right away. None of them will cross the picket line."

THE THREE WHO had donned the red-lettered "on strike" vests that day said they had never been in a picket line before, but they were vehement in their belief that this strike was necessary.

"Something has to be done," one said. "We've compromised enough. What would you do if you had been working for a company for six years and found out that a new person was hired for 20 cents an hour more than what you've been making," she said.

The union has charged the company with using a dual wage scale to hire new

General Time Strike Enters Third Week

A walkout of production employees at the General Time Corp. in Rolling Meadows entered its third week yesterday with no sign of contract negotiations resuming soon.

Michael Lisching, a member of the bargaining team for the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Local 713, said the company has still given no indication of willingness to reopen contract talks, despite intervention by a federal mediator.

The workers are asking for equalization of wage scales between newly-hired employees and those with seniority. They are also seeking a 7 per cent increase in hourly pay. The company has refused to meet the first demand for equalization and has offered a 16 1/2-cent hourly raise for all employees as a compromise on the second demand.

General Time manufactures electronic equipment and has done work for the government in connection with the manufacture of missile components.

personnel at higher pay than workers with seniority. The strike was called after three months of contract negotiations failed to produce an agreement on the wage issue.

But while the wage disagreement is at the crux of the deadlocked contract negotiations, Michael Lisching, a mechanical technician at General Time and a member of the union's bargaining team, feels there is more to the strike than just the money question.

"I know for myself that I feel, and I think most of the people connected with the strike feel the primary thing behind this whole strike is that the company has been so unfair in its practices," Lisching said. "The wage dispute in a way is only secondary in that respect."

"THAT FEELING in general is what I think is responsible for the 100 per cent walkout of the production people," he said. "I think that kind of total support answers any question about the worth of the strike in the minds of the workers."

But for whatever idealism might be behind it, a strike means a halt to the income of most families, and Lisching realizes some of his fellow workers may suffer to win what they consider a long-range victory.

"We have no strike fund," he said. "That's something that usually only the larger unions are big enough to provide. A small local doesn't have the money to provide one."

"I imagine the strike has been a financial burden to many. About 70 per cent of our workers are women, so for some there is still probably some income provided for a family by a husband. But many of the women are self-supporting, so I wouldn't be surprised if the strike is hurting them," he added.

"Some of the fellows have families growing up, and I imagine that a long strike would naturally be hard on them, too," Lisching admitted. But he emphasized the workers are determined to stay out as long as necessary to win.

Dawngate Land Eyed For Nature Area

The Dawngate property of Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 is being eyed as a possible outdoor nature area by the Rolling Meadows Park District.

The board of education has agreed to meet with the park board to discuss a possible land lease agreement for the parcel.

The seven-acre wooded site is on Dawngate Lane in Rolling Meadows. The area is not in the Rolling Meadows Park District.

"If the annexation (Plum Grove County) went through, this is one place we felt we could service the people," said Steve Person, superintendent of parks and recreation. "We are always interested in any land we can get cheap."

Person said the park district did not plan to destroy the wooded area but if a lease was arranged would use the property for an outdoor nature area with maybe a small picnic area.

Dist. 15 originally acquired the site for a future elementary school location. Development of the area has not yet warranted construction of a school on the site.

State Won't Open Rte. 53 At I-90 Intersection

The state of Illinois has no intention of opening Ill. Rte. 53 at the point it intersects Interstate 90 because of the danger of traffic moving the wrong direction on the Interstate, Sigmund Ziejewski, state transportation engineer, said last week.

In answer to a suggestion that Rte. 53 be made a southbound exit from Interstate 90, Ziejewski said the danger of the traffic attempting to enter the federal highway from Rte. 53 makes that alternative prohibitive.

Officials from Elk Grove Village, Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates have been concerned about the movement of traffic along Interstate 90 and Ill. Rte. 53 since the opening of the Interstate in September and the dead-ending of Rte. 53 where it joined the Interstate.

Reaching Alexian Brothers Medical Center on Blesterfield Road in Elk Grove Village also has become a problem for traffic coming to the village from the northwest.

ZIEJEWSKI SAID in an effort to enable traffic to find the quickest route to the hospital signs have been placed on Ill. 72 and Arlington Heights Road for westbound, eastbound and southbound traffic.

George Richter, operations engineer at the Illinois Highway Department, said there also are some informational signs for Alexian Brothers Medical Center posted on Rte. 53.

He said that the hospital has requested that signs be placed on Interstate 90, but the hospitals can only be marked on interstates if they have been designated as trauma centers.

"The Illinois Department of Public Health lists all hospitals certified as trauma centers, and so far Alexian Brothers Medical Center has not been designated as one," Richter said. He added that the federal highway markers for hospitals would have a symbol for a hospital on it and would not carry the name of the hospital.

AN OFFICIAL AT the Cook County Highway Department said yesterday so far he had not received a request for highway markers on county highways around the village, but the matter would be looked into.

Meanwhile Elk Grove Village and Schaumburg fire departments have worked out a cooperative arrangement for handling emergencies on the section of Interstate between Thorndale Avenue and Ill. Rte. 72.

Elk Grove Village Fire Chief Allen Hulet said if there was an accident or fire in the northbound lane of the Interstate, Schaumburg will respond. If something happened in the southbound lanes, Elk Grove Village fire department would handle it and transport patients to Alexian Brothers hospital.

PTA Notes

Willow Bend School's first afternoon PTA meeting will be held today from 1 to 2:30 p.m. in the lower commons area in the school at 4700 Barker, Rolling Meadows.

Mrs. Lorita Langley, director of pupil personnel services for Dist. 15, will speak on special services available to students in the district during the first half of the meeting. Faculty members will demonstrate the use of various teaching aids utilized in the resource center during the second part of the program.

Sitters will be available for preschool children.

"Then you're self-employed."

"YOU MIGHT SAY that. As for a reference, you could put Mr. Clement Moore."

"And what is your relation to Mr. Moore?"

"Oh, he's just a friend. I visited him one Christmas Eve and he wrote a poem about me."

"One last question, Mr. Kringle, do you have any dependents?"

"Oh, yes, 150 elves."

"I DON'T KNOW whether the IRS will allow that many," the interviewer answers nervously.

"Well, that's okay. I wouldn't want to cause any trouble," Santa answers as he rises from his chair. "If that's all the questions, may I ask when I start the job?"

"Let me put it this way, Mr. Kringle, don't call us, we'll call you."

Village To Buy Frame Building To House Offices

An agreement has been reached for the Village of Mount Prospect to buy the two-story frame building at 108-110 E. Northwest Hwy. for $33,000. The building will be used to house certain village offices, such as the building department, sanitation, and fire inspection bureau.

According to Village Mgr. Robert J. Epplay, a decision has not yet been made by the village board as to whether the two Community Action Program functions will be moved to the newly purchased building. Currently, these two programs, the Pump House Hotline and the ICE House Counseling Center, are located at different locations in the village.

As the Herald reported earlier this month, the building contains two second-floor apartments. Two families pay a total of $250 rent on a month-to-month lease basis. The first floor is used to contain a shoe repair shop.

"The village is not in such a hurry about occupying the second floor that they will be unreasonable," Epplay said in regard to moving the tenants. "We will get the people out without undue hardships, probably giving them 30 or 60 days. But by the first of the year to be sure."

Meanwhile, Epplay said that the income from the two tenants will help with the estimated $2,500 of remodeling that will have to be done to make the building usable. Epplay said the building "very definitely" will be repainted.

Epplay also said that two occupied apartments do not now meet the village's building code and will have to be updated as far as electrical wiring and heating are concerned.

The building is being purchased from Michele P. and Ermelinda Lombardo. The sum will be paid in five equal annual installments of $10,400 plus 3½ per cent interest. The first payment will be due July 1, 1973.

Epplay said that the building department will move into the building, which is next to the village hall, as soon as the first floor is made usable, well "before the end of the year."

MARGIE GREEN was one of the hundreds of art-works shoppers at Sunday's Prospect Heights Oktoberfest. The event, sponsored by the Prospect Heights Improvement Association, was held at Rte. 83 and Camp McDonald Road. Festivities included a parade and speeches by state office seekers from local districts.

Hundreds Watch Parade, Attend Oktoberfest

Despite chilly weather, hundreds turned out for Sunday's fire prevention parade and Oktoberfest in Prospect Heights.

Sunday's events climaxed a week of fire prevention activities sponsored by the Prospect Heights Volunteer Fire Department, that included the Miss Fire Prevention competition, a school poster contest and a dance. The Oktoberfest was held at the shopping center at Rte. 83 and Camp McDonald Road.

Sunday's parade began about 12:30 p.m. and included the Wheeling High School band, firefighting equipment from three departments, several floats and decorated bicycles.

Candidates running for state offices in the Prospect Heights area were given a chance to address the audience. Those at the Oktoberfest included Bradley Glass, Republican candidate for First District Senator; Brian Duff and John Porter, Republican candidates for state representative from the First District; Donald Norman one of two Democratic candidates for the First District representative posts; Robert Juckett and Eugene Schlickman, Republican candidates for representative in the Fourth District; Aaron Jaffe, Democrat candidate for Fourth District representative; and Democrat Tom Flynn and Republican John Nimrod, candidates for Fourth District senator.

Also at Sunday's Oktoberfest, local artists displayed their wares, and a rock band provided music later in the afternoon.

The Oktoberfest was sponsored by the Prospect Heights Improvement Association.

Pedestrian Killed On Wolf Road

An unidentified man was struck and killed by a car about 7 p.m. last night on Wolf Road just north of Euclid Avenue in Prospect Heights.

The victim was taken to Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines where he was pronounced dead on arrival. Authorities were unable to identify the man as of late last night. Hospital officials said he appeared to be in his late teens or early 20s.

An attendant at a service station adjacent to the accident scene said the man was standing on the side of Wolf Road, apparently hitchhiking, at the time of the accident.

A northbound auto had just completed passing another car on Wolf Road when it hit the youth. The attendant said the youth was apparently struck by the right side of the car. Further details were unavailable.

Trustee Link Still Wears Two Hats

Mount Prospect Village Trustee Patrick J. Link still wears two hats — one as village trustee and one as president of the River Trails Park District.

Link, selected village trustee May 23 to replace Richard H. Monroes, had planned to quit his park district post "within a few weeks" but delays in getting a federal grant for the park district process have delayed Link's departure.

"I don't know yet," Link said Friday when asked when he would make good on his promise to leave the park district board. "It looks like we will be getting the HUD grant within 60 days. I have to sign these papers (for the grant) to keep the continuity (of signatures on them)."

Last May the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) approved a grant for up to 50 per cent of the purchase price of a 19-acre section of the Rob Roy Driving Range on Euclid Avenue. However, delays in the actual purchase of the land and a determination of the price, have held up the HUD funds. Link thinks he must continue as park district president until those funds are received and all papers have been signed — by him.

THE ACTUAL PRICE of the land will probably be determined in court through a condemnation suit as an agreed price with Kenroy Inc., owners of the driving range, fell through. The agreement was canceled when the contracts were not signed by a July 1 deadline. The park district could not sign the contract without a commitment from HUD on the money and HUD was requesting more details about the agreement between the park district and Kenroy.

Mayor Robert D. Teichert said yesterday that "it is not a problem at this point" that Link holds the two positions. "I don't find it objectionable unless a conflict situation develops," he said.

There is no village board policy against its members holding two elective positions, Teichert said, but he added that such a situation is unusual because of the large amounts of time that each job takes. He added that he understood it to be Link's intent to quit the park district presidency as soon as he can.

DURING VILLAGE board discussions on the Kenroy request for rezoning of the north 19 acres of the Rob Roy Driving Range (as opposed to the south 19 acres that the park district wishes to buy) and some rezoning cases along River Road, Link has abstained from voting because of conflict of interest.

However, Teichert pointed out that Link would have had to abstain in these cases whether or not he was on the River Trails Park District board, because in each instance he had either appeared as an objector during hearings or had counseled objectors.

The only potential conflict that Teichert could envision arising would be if the park district board were to take a position on the Rob Roy situation that would be adverse to the village board. At this point such a position would be that the park district board want high-rise, multi-family units on the land and that is considered highly unlikely, as Link and other park board members have vigorously opposed such development.

Thousands Of Voters Must Prove Their Eligibility

Thousands of registered voters in the Northwest suburbs have been challenged to prove their eligibility, or be unable to vote in the Nov. 7 general elections.

The widespread distribution of notices informing voters "to show cause why registration to vote should not be canceled" apparently stems from the efforts of overzealous canvassers attempting to remove from registration rolls persons who have changed their names, moved or died.

A spokesman for the election department in the Cook County clerk's office said voters who received the notices but who have not changed their names or addresses can disregard the stipulation that they appear in person before the Board of Revision in Chicago yesterday or today.

To remain registered, however, voters who received the notice must mail it to the board's office, Room 402, County Building, 188 N. Clark St., Chicago, by the end of this week.

The notice should be signed attesting to the voter's eligibility but need not be notarized, the spokesman said.

THE CLERK's office on Monday was deluged with "millions of calls from all over," according to the spokesman.

The distribution of registration cancellation warnings apparently was not politically motivated. In many cases, newly registered voters received the notices. In some cases, persons who have lived at the same addresses for 15 years were challenged. And in other instances some members of a family were challenged and not others.

"What are they trying to do," said one Palatine village trustee, — disenfranch-

This Morning In Brief

The State

The president of largely black Malcolm X College charged that authorities investigating the alleged "De Mau Mau" murders of nine white persons perpetrated for political reasons "the myth that black people come out of the ghetto, sweep down and kill the whites."

Ironically, Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie's call for a special legislative session on tax and school finance drew some Democratic praise and a hint of indifference from one high-ranking Republican, Senate President Pro Tem Cecil Patter of Chicago.

A defense attorney argued that the prosecution's evidence is "wholly insufficient" to convict Cook County State's Atty. Edward V. Hanrahan and 15 co-defendants in the Black Panther police raid case.

Bernard Carey, Republican candidate for Cook County state's attorney, said he has appealed to President Nixon to station federal marshals in Chicago to prevent vote fraud in the November election.

Actress Jane Fonda, leading a group of antiwar activists speaking to Southern Illinois University's Carbondale campus said President Nixon has escalated the war and that Sen. George McGovern could end it.

The Nation

A small army of police fanned out through Brooklyn and three suburban counties, carrying subpoenas for 677 persons linked with an "organized crime headquarters" which had been under surveillance for a year. A district attorney said the headquarters was in a trailer in an automobile junkyard.

The Supreme Court voted 7-2 to refuse another legal effort to have the Vietnam War declared unconstitutional.

President Nixon made an unscheduled visit to a convention of families of American POWs and promised that "under no circumstances" would the men be abandoned. He also said their men had paid too high a price in Vietnam for him to grant amnesty to those who refused to serve there.

The World

Dynamiters blew up railway tracks and riot police smashed locks on downtown stores that defied an army order to open during nationwide strikes which have crippled Chile. Chile's top Communist official said a "revolt" was under way.

The War

Heavy fighting erupted in the war-scarred mountain jungles outside of Hue, while far to the south, Vietnamese government troops reopened a major highway into Saigon. U.S. planes battered an airfield far north of Hanoi. Three American aircraft were reported lost in operations elsewhere in Indochina.

Inviting a favorite teacher home to lunch has been standard practice among grade school youngsters for years. However, three Fairview School teachers have turned the tables on the kids.

Last week Elizabeth Shachman, Fran Black, and Joan Brueggemann took a group of their students out to lunch. They plan to continue this throughout the year on an every-other-Friday basis.

By June all the youngsters in Mrs. Shachman's fifth grade, Mrs. Black's sixth grade, and Miss Brueggemann's learning disability program will have had a turn.

"We just wanted to get to know the kids better," explained Mrs. Shachman. "We decided to take them out to lunch two at a time. At school we usually talk only about school things. When we go out we talk about other things, too. It was fun!" The youngsters think so, too.

AIRMAN DONALD Krienitz, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Krienitz of 23 N. Main St., left last week for his new assignment at the U.S. Air Force base in Puerto Rico. His bride, the former Diane Malkowski of Albuquerque, N.M., hopes to join him there soon.

Airman Krienitz is a 1969 graduate of Prospect High School. He attended Harper College before entering the Air Force. After completing his basic training at Lackland Air Force Base in Texas, he was assigned to Sheppard Air Force Base, also in Texas.

Gary Kizior has recently been commissioned a second lieutenant in the U. S. Air Force. He was graduated from Illinois Institute of Technology, where he was in the U. S. Air Force Reserve Officers Training Corps.

Now Lt. Kizior is a graduate student in chemical engineering at the University of Illinois in Champaign-Urbana. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kizior of 1222 W. Sunset Rd.

Dr. Orlando Perdomo, area minister of Spanish workers, will discuss his work and ministry today at South Church — Community Baptist. He is the featured speaker at the woman's guild luncheon in fellowship hall.

FROM A FORMER Mount Prospect teacher, Jill Schlesinger, has come word of her new son. Todd Michael was born Sept. 18. Mrs. Schlesinger taught at Busse School in 1969-70 and at Lions Park the following two years.

A bird, a reptile, and a mammal from Lincoln Park Zoo will be special visitors at Busse School today. Accompanying them will be staff member Pat Marsh, who will talk to the youngsters about the zoo. This is part of the school's cultural arts program, led by Judy Vershoor and Barbara Phillips.

Joyce Jones has been initiated into Pi Beta Phi social sorority at the University of Michigan. A freshman, Joyce is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Art Jones of 502 S. Owen St. She is planning to major in interior design.

Ogilvie Gives School Fund Proposals

Gov. Richard Ogilvie gave his proposals for increasing the funding of Illinois schools the hard sell last night to a meeting of school principals, but soft-pedaled his proposal to freeze real estate property taxes.

Speaking at the Illinois Principals' Association conference at Arlington Park Towers in Arlington Heights, the governor detailed the school financing proposals he will make to a special session of the General Assembly, but barely touched on the tax freeze proposal he will also make.

Earlier in the day, Ogilvie had told a press conference he is calling a special session of the legislature for late November. He said he will ask the legislators to freeze property taxes and allocate the state's $100 million in revenue sharing monies to schools.

Without spelling out his tax plan to the principals, Ogilvie said he had proposed to "provide the first real tax relief in Illinois history."

HE ADDED, "The real key to tax relief is careful attention to the needs of Illinois schools. I will not sacrifice quality education on the altar of political expediency.

In addition to making the "lion's share" of the state's revenue sharing money available to schools, Ogilvie said, "We can make it possible for the cities, counties and township governments which will receive $200 million to make some of their money available for schools where local conditions warrant."

Ogilvie received the warmest response of his half hour speech when he told the group, "We in Springfield are prepared to offer every conceivable form of technical, financial and manpower assistance, but we have no intention of imposing our decisions as long as I'm governor on those of you who are on the firing line."

The governor also said that during his term Illinois has gone from 47th in state support of education to 26th. In a veiled swipe at his Democratic opponent Dan Walker, he added, "That is hardly the record of neglect that some people have tried to portray."

In what appeared to be another reference to Walker, the governor said, "Everyone's for better schools and now that motherhood and the flag are somewhat suspect in certain quarters, better schools may be the only thing left for political rhetoric. But it's not enough to be for better schools. What we need is a record of concern and of strong commitment."

chise everyone?"

Palatine Township Clerk Ruth Ellen

Blowney said canvassers are supposed to verify that persons listed on the registration rolls are still eligible to vote.

In cases where an individual is not at home when the canvassers arrive, they are to leave a pink slip asking the person to contact them within 48 hours, Mrs. Blowney said, or a final notice will be sent by mail informing the person that unless he appears at the county office, his registration will be cancelled.

In many cases, however, the pink slips were not received, or were received after the final notice, she said.

Palatine village officials are making available form letters for qualified voters who received notices of disenfranchisement. The forms are available at village hall, 54 S. Brockway St.

Yes, Virginia, Even Santa Is Paid

by TONI GINETTI

If you have kids at home, please don't let them see this. I'd hate to be the one blamed for spoiling a sacred childhood belief.

I've just found out that Santa Claus gets paid. That's right, he gets paid for giving presents and spreading good cheer at Christmas time. Not only that, he gets paid pretty well in my opinion, $3 an hour!

At least that's what he makes at Woodfield. I found that out when I noticed an ad in the job section advertising for a Santa Claus for the mall. What does it take to be Santa Claus?

"A fat man with a deep voice," said Jerry Dempsey, with a laugh. He is the man at Woodfield who will decide this week who will be the mall's Santa. "Seriously, though, it's one of the hardest things to do all year. We never anticipate a smooth-running operation."

DEMPSEY EXPLAINED this was so because, as terrible as this may sound, being Santa is "the toughest, most physically draining and mentally mind-bending experience there is. It's worse than digging ditches!"

"You have to realize 'Santa' has to pick up just about every child, and that amounts sometimes to a child a minute. The complaints at the end of the day are always of stiff arms and sore backs, as if they were chopping wood all day," he said.

In fact, Dempsey said, the job is so demanding that it's just too much for one person to handle. Santa's 70-hour work week will be manned in shifts by six persons. Incidentally, women need not apply because, while Dempsey said he'd be willing to talk to a girl if she came in for the job, "we try to stick to the traditional kind of concept of Santa that will come across best psychologically for the kids."

He's got a point there. But sometimes outside appearances might not tell the true story of a person's qualifications for a job like Santa's. Take, for example, what might happen if one of the some 15 applicants Dempsey interviews this week was the real (yes, Virginia) Santa. A standard job interview might not turn out too well...

"I saw your ad in the paper for Santa Claus, so I thought I'd come down and find out what you wanted," Santa might say.

"I TAKE IT you'd like to apply for a job as Santa," the interviewer asks.

"Not AS Santa, I AM Santa."

"I see," the interviewer says, trying to humor him. "Your name is Santa Claus?"

"No, my name is Christopher Kringle, but many children prefer to call me Santa or St. Nicholas."

"Is that so," the interviewer answers cautiously. "All right Mr. Kringle, let's just fill out this application. Do you live in the neighborhood?"

"NO, I LIVE in the North Pole."

"And how would you get to work each day?"

"Well I have this team of eight tiny reindeer who can fly my sleigh here in no time."

The interviewer wipes his brow and then asks, "I'll need some references and information on past job experience."

Thousands Must Prove They Are Eligible To Vote

Thousands of registered voters in the Northwest suburbs have been challenged to prove their eligibility, or be unable to vote in the Nov. 7 general elections.

The widespread distribution of notices informing voters "to show cause why registration to vote should not be canceled" apparently stems from the efforts of overzealous canvassers attempting to remove from registration rolls persons who have changed their names, moved or died.

A spokesman for the election department in the Cook County clerk's office said voters who received the notices but who have not changed their names or addresses can disregard the stipulation that they appear in person before the Board of Revision in Chicago yesterday or today.

To remain registered, however, voters who received the notice must mail it to the board's office, Room 402, County Building, 188 N. Clark St., Chicago, by the end of this week.

The notice should be signed attesting to the voter's eligibility but need not be notarized, the spokesman said.

THE CLERK'S office on Monday was deluged with "millions of calls from all over," according to the spokesman.

The distribution of registration cancellation warnings apparently was not politically motivated. In many cases, newly registered voters received the notices. In some cases, persons who have lived at the same addresses for 15 years were challenged. And in other instances some members of a family were challenged and not others.

"What are they trying to do," said one Palatine village trustee, — disenfranchise everyone?"

The notices were distributed over the weekend, signed by the Republican and Democratic canvassers in each precinct. The canvassers are selected by precinct committeemen, and serve as judges on election days.

Palatine Township Clerk Ruth Ellen Blowney said canvassers are supposed to verify that persons listed on the registration rolls are still eligible to vote.

In cases where an individual is not at home when the canvassers arrive, they are to leave a pink slip asking the person to contact them within 48 hours. Mrs. Blowney said, or a final notice will be sent by mail informing the person that unless he appears at the county office, his registration will be cancelled.

In many cases, however, the pink slips were not received, or were received after the final notice, she said.

Palatine village officials are making available form letters for qualified voters who received notices of disenfranchisement. The forms are available at village hall, 54 S. Brockway St.

UP THE SCALE . . . or down. Sometimes it's hard for kindergartners to tell the high notes from low notes. But children at Park School in Arlington Heights are learning fast, with the help of Sue Lazar, a speech correctionist for School Dist. 25. Mrs. Lazar meets with all Park School kindergartners once a week to teach them not only about highs and lows, but also different sounds.

Board May Ask Voters To OK More Trustees

A proposition to increase the Arlington Heights Village Board from six to eight trustees now appears likely to be included on the Dec. 2 village-wide referendum.

The village board voted 4-2 last night to instruct Village Atty. Jack Siegel to draft an ordinance that would include the question of whether or not the size of the board should be increased on the Dec. 2 referendum when residents will vote on an estimated $3 million worth of park district improvements.

In June the form of government committee (FOG) voted 5-4 to recommend expanding the board by two trustees.

Trustee Dwight Walton last night introduced a motion to put the proposed increase to a referendum vote—saying that the "residents of the community should have a chance to decide what kind of government is going to represent them."

VILLAGE PRES. John Woods and Trustee Ralph Clabour voted against including the question on the Dec. 2 ballot.

Woods said he did not "enthusiastically support" the motion because he thought bigger boards tended to increase communication difficulties and diminish the importance of each individual board member.

He cited the cities of Chicago, Des Plaines and Rolling Meadows as examples where bigger councils have reduced the role of individual representatives.

"I think I perceive a strong mayor and diminished importance of the council in each of these instances," Woods said.

'Sizzling Steak Sound' Is Part Of Learning

by CINDY TEW

Splat, grum, tic, tic, blorp, sizzle. Sounding something like a bunch of steaks broiling, kindergartners in Arlington Heights School Dist. 25 play word games with high and low pitched words and consonant sounds. And from all indications, the 5 and 6 year olds are learning, too.

"The program has been going on for three years now, and first grade teachers have commented that the program is most helpful in reading — the students are more sound conscious," said Sue Lazar, speech correctionist.

Mrs. Lazar works with children from Park School, Our Lady of the Wayside School and South Junior High School. There are six other speech correctionists in the district who have separate programs for preparing children for first grade.

ONCE MRS. LAZAR thinks the children have a pretty good idea of the difference between high and low sounds, she will begin introducing characters like Jerry Jelly Bean. Jerry, "the jolliest, juiciest jelly bean of all," will teach the children about the "j" sound.

"First I tell a story about the character, using the sound I'm teaching as much as possible," said Mrs. Lazar. Some of the characters and stories are created by the teacher. "After I tell the story, I have the children tell me what the sound is and we discuss how to say the sound," she said.

The children at Park School who visit Mrs. Lazar each Friday for a half an hour try to discover other words with sounds of the week. If their name starts with that sound, they get a badge.

On the "j" day, Jane, Jim and Jean will get a badge with a picture of Jimmy Jelly Bean on it.

"The lesson is carried through in the classroom, too," said Mrs. Lazar. "Each child tries to find pictures of things that start with the sound of the week to put in the class scrapbook."

During the "j" week pictures of jars, giraffes and jingle bells may well appear in the scrapbook.

The program seems to train more than the mouths of the children. The riddles they come up with — that have an answer beginning with the sound of the week — are often very creative.

"Jerry Jelly Bean went out to find something, what did he find?" asked a kindergarten girl. The other students, including the teacher, tried guessing every conceivable "thing" that started with a "j" then finally gave up.

"Jerry came back with a lady jelly bean named Judy," the girl said, delighted she had stumped everyone.

Today's Political Profiles

This Morning In Brief

The State

The president of largely black Malcolm X College charged that authorities investigating the alleged "De Mau Mau" murders of nine white persons perpetuated for political reasons "the myth that black people come out of the ghetto, sweep down and kill the whites."

Ironically, Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie's call for a special legislative session on tax and school finance drew some Democratic praise and a hint of indifference from one high-ranking Republican, Senate President Pro Tem Cecil Pardee of Chicago.

A defense attorney argued that the prosecution's evidence is "wholly insufficient" to convict Cook County State's Atty. Edward V. Hanrahan and 13 co-defendants in the Black Panther police raid case.

Bernard Carey, Republican candidate for Cook County state's attorney, said he has appealed to President Nixon to station federal marshals in Chicago to prevent vote fraud in the November election.

Actress Jane Fonda, leading a group of antiwar activists speaking to Southern Illinois University's Carbondale campus, said President Nixon has escalated the war and that Sen. George McGovern could end it.

The Nation

A small army of police fanned out through Brooklyn and three suburban counties, carrying subpoenas for 677 persons linked with an "organized crime headquarters" which had been under surveillance for a year. A district attorney said the headquarters was in a trailer in an automobile junkyard.

The Supreme Court voted 7-2 to refuse another legal effort to have the Vietnam War declared unconstitutional.

President Nixon made an unscheduled visit to a convention of families of American POWs and promised that "under no circumstances" would the men be abandoned. He also said their men had paid too high a price in Vietnam for him to grant amnesty to those who refused to serve there.

The World

Dynamiters blew up railway tracks and riot police smashed locks on downtown stores that defied an army order to open during nationwide strikes which have crippled Chile. Chile's top Communist official said a "revolt" was under way.

The War

Heavy fighting erupted in the war-scarred mountain jungles outside of Hue, while far to the south, Vietnamese government troops reopened a major highway into Saigon. U.S. planes battered an airfield far north of Hanoi. Three American aircraft were reported lost in operations elsewhere in Indochina.

Ogilvie Gives Hard Sell On School Funds

Gov. Richard Ogilvie gave his proposals for increasing the funding of Illinois schools the hard sell last night to a meeting of school principals, but soft-pedaled his proposal to freeze real estate property taxes.

Speaking at the Illinois Principals' Association conference at Arlington Park Towers in Arlington Heights, the governor detailed the school financing proposals he will make to a special session of the General Assembly, but barely touched on the tax freeze proposal he will also make.

Earlier in the day, Ogilvie had told a press conference he is calling a special session of the legislature for late November. He said he will ask the legislators to freeze property taxes and allocate the state's $100 million in revenue sharing monies to schools.

Without spelling out his tax plan to the principals, Ogilvie said he had proposed to "provide the first real tax relief in Illinois history."

HE ADDED, "The real key to tax relief is careful attention to the needs of Illinois schools. I will not sacrifice quality education on the altar of political expediency."

In addition to making the "lion's share" of the state's revenue sharing money available to schools, Ogilvie said, "We can make it possible for the cities, counties and township governments which will receive $200 million to make some of their money available for schools where local conditions warrant."

Ogilvie received the warmest response of his half hour speech when he told the group, "We in Springfield are prepared to offer every conceivable form of technical, financial and manpower assistance, but we have no intention of imposing our decisions as long as I'm governor on those of you who are on the firing line."

The governor also said that during his term Illinois has gone from 47th in state support of education to 26th. In a veiled swipe at his Democratic opponent Dan Walker, he added, "That is hardly the record of neglect that some people have tried to portray."

In what appeared to be another reference to Walker, the governor said, "Everyone's for better schools and now that motherhood and the flag are somewhat suspect in certain quarters, better schools may be the only thing left for political rhetoric. But it's not enough to be for better schools. What we need is a record of concern and of strong commitment."

$4,000 Fire Fought In Patton Ave. Home

Two companies of the Arlington Heights Fire Department fought a fire early Saturday afternoon that did $4,000 damage to the home of Jack Nystrom, 21 S. Patton Ave.

The cause of the fire is unknown, but firemen were notified when Nystrom's son discovered clothes burning and flames coming out of a furnace in the corner of the laundry room, a fire department spokesman said. When firemen arrived, they found heavy smoke throughout the two-and-a-half story house.

Damage amounted to $2,000 for the structure and $2,000 for contents.

Held On Marijuana, Drinking Counts

A man arrested Sunday by Arlington Heights police and charged with public intoxication was later charged with possession of marijuana after police allegedly found a small packet of the drug in his pocket while he was being searched.

Police received a call Sunday from the Arlington Park Towers Hotel security department saying an intoxicated man was causing a disturbance. Police found Kevin P. Moore, 20, Park Ridge, yelling in the hotel parking lot. When Moore refused to leave, he was arrested for public intoxication, police said.

Police said they later found three grams of marijuana in Moore's possession while he was being searched at the police station. He was then charged with possession of marijuana and lodged in the village jail to await $1,000 bond.

TV, Radio Antenna To Be Discussed

A discussion of tall radio and television antenna towers in residential areas is one of four items scheduled for discussion by the public health and safety committee at its meeting tonight.

Complaints about the presence of tall towers in residential neighborhoods were referred to the committee by the full village board.

A second agenda item includes discussion of alleged maintenance problems at the Pal Grove shopping center.

Also scheduled is a request by Buhrke Industries, Inc., 507 W. Algonquin Rd., for a sign variation and discussion of the need for sidewalks in industrial parks in Arlington Heights.

The public health and safety committee is scheduled to convene at 8 p.m. at the Municipal Building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

State Won't Open Rte. 53 At I-90 Intersection

The state of Illinois has no intention of opening Ill. Rte. 53 at the point it intersects Interstate 90 because of the danger of traffic moving the wrong direction on the interstate, Sigmund Ziejewski, state transportation engineer, said last week.

In answer to a suggestion that Rte. 53 be made a southbound exit from Interstate 90, Ziejewski said the danger of the traffic attempting to enter the federal highway from Rte. 53 makes that alternative prohibitive.

Officials from Elk Grove Village, Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates have been concerned about the movement of traffic along Interstate 90 and Ill. Rte. 53 since the opening of the interstate in September and the dead-ending of Rte. 53 where it joined the interstate.

Reaching Alexian Brothers Medical Center on Blesterfield Road in Elk Grove Village also has become a problem for traffic coming to the village from the northwest.

ZIEJEWSKI SAID in an effort to enable traffic to find the quickest route to the hospital signs have been placed on Ill. 73 and Arlington Heights Road for westbound, eastbound and southbound traffic.

George Richter, operations engineer at the Illinois Highway Department, said there also are some informational signs for Alexian Brothers Medical Center posted on Rte. 53.

He said that the hospital has requested that signs be placed on Interstate 90, but the hospitals can only be marked on interstates if they have been designated as trauma centers.

"The Illinois Department of Public Health lists all hospitals certified as trauma centers, and so far Alexian Brothers Medical Center has not been designated as one," Richter said. He added that the federal highway markers for hospitals would have a symbol for a hospital on it and would not carry the name of the hospital.

AN OFFICIAL AT the Cook County Highway Department said yesterday so far he had not received a request for highway markers on county highways around the village, but the matter would be looked into.

Meanwhile Elk Grove Village and Schaumburg fire departments have worked out a cooperative arrangement for handling emergencies on the section of interstate between Thorndale Avenue and Ill. Rte. 72.

Elk Grove Village Fire Chief Allen Hulet said if there was an accident or fire in the northbound lane of the interstate, Schaumburg will respond. If something happened in the southbound lanes, Elk Grove Village fire department would handle it and transport patients to Alexian Brothers hospital.

Woods Seeks Joint Study

Village Pres. John Woods has recommended that special committees on flood problems in Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect meet together to explore flooding problems that affect both villages.

In Arlington Heights, a citizens' committee on flooding was established last month. Mount Prospect's Drainage and Clean Streams committee was formed in 1967, following severe summer flooding problems.

The citizens' committee in Arlington Heights has hired a Skokie engineering firm, R. J. Peterson and Associates, to prepare an updated report on village flood problems and what can be done to remedy them.

That report is scheduled to be completed in about six weeks and will cost $14,000. SINCE ITS formation five years ago, the Mount Prospect committee has worked on the village's flood plain ordinance and the location of two retention basins along Busse Road.

The drainage and clean streams committee has also been working with the state on the widening of Weller Creek.

Both committees have mailed out residential questionnaires recently, asking homeowners for information about flooding problems they experienced this summer.

"Both Bob Teichert and I feel it's a good idea for the two committees to meet and discuss areas of common problems," Arlington Heights Village Pres. John Woods said Friday.

U.S. Agencies Study Watershed Pact

The Upper Salt Creek Watershed Agreement is now being circulated among various federal agencies in Washington, D.C., prior to being submitted to the Congress for approval of federal funding.

Barry Good, legislative assistant to Sen. Adlai Stevenson III, D-Ill., said Monday the agreement must be reviewed by 10 agencies. The comments these agencies have on the agreement will be included in a report to the Senate public works commission.

The commission will then take action on the possible federal funding of the project.

IF THE COMMISSION recommends approval of federal funds, and Congress can act on the measure in the next legislative session, the funds would be available for the 1974 fiscal year which starts July 1, 1973.

The Upper Salt Creek Watershed Agreement is a $26.5 million plan to build flood controls across the creek. Federal funds for approximately half the cost of the project are being requested. These funds would be administered through the U.S. Soil Conservation Service.

The balance of the funds would come from state and local government agencies. Sixteen state and local agencies signed the agreement before it was sent to Washington in mid-September.

On Sept. 19, Gov. Richard Ogilvie announced the state would not wait for federal funding, but would expand the program and begin work at once. The governor made his announcement after suburban areas along the creek had suffered

Northgate Defects Still Not Solved

The Northgate Civic Association has set another meeting to present grievances that there are defects in their subdivision, including flooding problems and shoddy home construction.

Village officials and an estimated 200 persons attended a meeting Friday night in an effort to resolve the problems. Representatives of Miller Builders, developer of the subdivision, did not attend the session and another meeting was set for this Saturday.

Some 125 persons have reported defects in their homes or drainage problems, according to George Winandy, spokesman for the homeowners. He said "some things have been done already but not enough."

Winandy said homeowners suspect part of the drainage problems come from the Mill Creek subdivision, in Buffalo Grove, also built by Miller Builders. Buffalo Grove officials will be asked to attend next Saturday's meeting.

Meanwhile, Arlington Heights officials have refused to issue any new building permits until the alleged defects are investigated.

Council Delays Action On Civic Center, Remap

Civic center and ward remap proposals were delayed last night "for study" by the Des Plaines City Council.

The council did approve sale of $825,000 in parking revenue bonds at 9:30 a.m. Thursday to spur downtown redevelopment.

Although 11 council members announced support of a proposal to construct a five or six-story, $1.45 million city hall at a committee-of-the-whole meeting last week, building and grounds committee chairman Joseph Szabo 1st presented only a "progress report" last night.

"We recommend that we build only a five-story building . . . on a theory or new concept on installment contract," Szabo said. "We can't authorize further plans until we have some commitment of money."

SZABO ASKED THE council to authorize Mayor Herbert Behrel, Comptroller Wayne Biletz, City Atty. Robert DiLeonardi and himself to study the bank-financed purchase plan.

The committee "discounted" or ruled out previous plans of condominium financing through part city and part private ownership, he said.

Architects Holmes and Fox told the committee last week that four months are required to complete "working drawings" of the building which could lead to project bidding. Council members last week talked of bidding the project this winter to secure "off-season" construction prices.

City officials announced location of the proposed city hall, at 1420-1424 Miner Street, in January of 1968. Financing has delayed the project since then.

THE REMAP PROPOSAL was placed on the council's Nov. 6 agenda after parliamentary maneuvering by Ald. Allen Abrams (8th) and Ald. Robert Michaels (8th).

Szabo, who also headed the council's remap committee after two proposals by City Clerk Eleanor Rohrbach were rejected, moved that the council approve a map drawn two weeks ago by City Planner Mike Richardson. The map, which contains less than one per cent population disparity, does not locate incumbent aldermen seeking 1973 election in the same wards.

Abrams distributed another map last night that contained "a proper representation for the western part of the city."

The Abrams map placed the proposed eighth ward in the northwest corner of Des Plaines and set current ward residences in two instead of three possible wards. The proposal, which is similar to Mrs. Rohrbach's, would displace at least one current alderman, pitting two incumbents against each other for reelection.

ABRAMS MOVED to defer action on Szabo's motion to approve the committee map. Michaels seconded Abrams. Statutes state that action on a committee report is automatically deferred upon request of two aldermen. DiLeonardi told the council.

The two proposed maps were referred to the committee, Mrs. Rohrbach and Richardson for study of population totals. The committee map population does not agree with Mrs. Rohrbach's, Abrams said.

"If the map is approved . . . it is essential that any doubts be resolved. We represent an obvious minority here tonight," he said. Mrs. Rohrbach originally set an Oct. 15 deadline for completion of the map.

Carson Extortion Suspect Once Arrested In Area

A California man charged by Los Angeles police with trying to extort money from television personality Johnny Carson had been arrested in Des Plaines on April 11 for a $20,000 armed robbery.

Richard Dziabacinski, 26 of Sun Valley, Calif., was apprehended by Los Angeles police Friday night along with two accomplices after allegedly picking up the extortion money in a Van Nuys, Calif. parking lot.

Dziabacinski was arrested by Cook County Sheriff's police April 11 after he lured several youths to an apartment at 9273 Fairway Dr., Des Plaines, with an offer to sell the group 150 pounds of marijuana for $19,750.

According to Sgt. Clyde Abney, the arresting officer, when the young people arrived at the Fairway Dr. address Dziabacinski pulled a gun on the youths, took the money and pretended to kidnap a 19-year-old female accomplice who had been waiting at the apartment with Dziabacinski and the girl later turned reportedly lived in the apartment.

AFTER DZIABACINSKI and the girl escaped DiPietro and the youths notified Cook County Sheriff's police.

Dziabacinski and the girl later turned themselves into police and denied being part of the elaborate holdup scheme. DiPietro earlier reportedly admitted being part of the robbery and implicated Dziabacinski and the girl, who were identified by the youths after turning themselves in, according to reports.

The ten youths were subsequently charged with conspiracy to buy marijuana.

Both the armed robbery charges against Dziabacinski and his two alleged accomplices and the conspiracy charges against the 10 youths who had planned to buy the marijuana were dropped in June because none of the participants would testify against one another.

Police indicated at the time of the robbery that Dziabacinski and his accomplice never had 150 pounds of marijuana to sell the 10 youths. The cash was not recovered.

CAMPUS LIFE MEETINGS always draw a large crowd of high-school students. Campus Life, a religious awareness group for high school students has local chapters throughout the country. Dave Veerman, executive director of the north area division, said the campus life chapters at the four Maine High Schools are growing in membership each year. Last Thursday over 60 students attended Maine East chapter meeting at a student's home on Clara Dr., Niles.

They Seek Answers To Depression

Pupils Find Life In Christianity

Christianity, an old answer to the problems that people face, has found new life among students at local high schools.

Young people are turning to Christianity for the answer to the psychological depression and hopelessness with which they regard society today, said Dave Veerman, executive director of north area Campus Life, a religious awareness group for high school students.

The local chapters at Maine East and West high schools are growing in membership and this year a new chapter was founded at Maine North High School by Mike West, a campus life director. Directors predict an increase in the membership in Campus Life chapters in the north and Northwest suburban area by 2,500 students this year.

BRUCE DART, one of the campus life directors in the Northwest suburbs, said he believes the feeling of depression and despair is widespread among today's youth. Ten years ago high school students were optimistic about society, said Dart. They recognized that there were problems, but their attitude was that "given enough time, money, and education, we can lick anything," he said.

So much has happened in the last few years like the cold war, riots, and the racial problem that our "developed society seems void" and students feel burdened, frustrated and on the "brink of despair," said Dart.

Some turn to alcohol, the occult, encounter groups, sex or drugs to cope with their feelings. Those who turn to Jesus feel the love of a Supreme Being and the love of their fellow students, said Dart, and they "realize the spiritual division of their life is the most important."

Dart said campus life is successful, "because it works. Jesus is a reality," drugs aren't.

"We deal with the whole person," said Veerman, not just his social, spiritual or psychological make-up. "We try to help the high school student get things together in his own life," he said, "a relationship with God brings meaning to all these areas."

EACH CAMPUS life chapter holds meetings each week that are "primarily social," said Veerman. Students are encouraged to express their ideas and honesty and openness are emphasized.

Campus Life tries to make meetings as relevant and conversation provoking as possible, said Mike West, director at Maine West High School. In two recent meetings, one at Maine North and one at Maine West, the head coach of the school's varsity football team attended the meeting and was interviewed. After several questions about the new season posed by Mike West, coaches Louis E. Gartner, Maine North, and James Morel, Maine West, were asked, "What moral value do you see in football?" The conversation then turned to the relation between physical fitness and spiritual fitness.

Most of the students involved in campus life are upper classmen, and surprisingly, many of them are Jewish, said Veerman.

At the Maine East campus life meetings, about one fifth of the group is Jewish, said Veerman, and about 40 per cent of the students at Maine East are Jewish. "They don't object to being told about Christ, they object to being ignored," he said.

CAMPUS LIFE is an interdenominational Christian youth organization that has chapters nation-wide, said Veerman. It is an independent group, not administered by schools, government or churches. It is a non-profit organization and director salaries and group facilities are funded through donations from churches, individuals, and civic groups.

Since 1964 north area Campus Life has grown from six clubs to 30 in the north and Northwest suburbs and the staff has grown from one full-time director to 13. The most recent addition to the staff is Bruce Dart, who will direct the proposed youth guidance program this year. Dart will work through the local police departments in the Northwest suburbs to counsel young people who are or have been in trouble with the law. The program is being organized this month.

Some activities that are planned by campus life each year include area wide activities such as weekend camps and conferences, concerts by the campus life music group, "Under New Management," a leadership breakfast in December, a haunted house party at Halloween, and a spring "riot" or day-long picnic held at the close of the school year.

Mini-Bike Stolen

A mini-bike valued at $225 was stolen from the rear of a Des Plaines residence during the weekend.

John R. McPeak of 2511 Ballard Rd. told police the yellow mini-bike was taken from the rear of his home sometime Friday night.

This Morning In Brief

The State

The president of largely black Malcolm X College charged that authorities investigating the alleged "Dr. Mau Mau" murders of nine white persons perpetrated for political reasons "the myth that black people come out of the ghetto, sweep down and kill the whites."

Ironically, Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie's call for a special legislative session on tax and school finance drew some Democratic praise and a hint of indifference from one high-ranking Republican, Senate President Pro Tem Cecil Pardee of Chicago.

A defense attorney argued that the prosecution's evidence is "wholly insufficient" to convict Cook County State's Atty. Edward V. Hanrahan and 13 co-defendants in the Black Panther police raid case.

Bernard Carey, Republican candidate for Cook County state's attorney, said he has appealed to President Nixon to station federal marshals in Chicago to prevent vote fraud in the November election.

Actress Jane Fonda, leading a group of antiwar activists speaking to Southern Illinois University's Carbondale campus said President Nixon has escalated the war and that Sen. George McGovern could end it.

The Nation

A small army of police fanned out through Brooklyn and three suburban counties, carrying subpoenas for 677 persons linked with an "organized crime headquarters" which had been under surveillance for a year. A district attorney said the headquarters was in a trailer in an automobile junkyard.

The Supreme Court voted 7-2 to refuse another legal effort to have the Vietnam War declared unconstitutional.

President Nixon made an unscheduled visit to a convention of families of American POWs and promised that "under no circumstances" would the men be abandoned. He also said their men had paid too high a price in Vietnam for him to grant amnesty to those who refused to serve there.

The World

Dynamiters blew up railway tracks and riot police smashed locks on downtown stores that defied an army order to open during nationwide strikes which have crippled Chile. Chile's top Communist official said a "revolt" was under way.

The War

Heavy fighting erupted in the war-scarred mountains jungles outside of Hue, while far to the south, Vietnamese government troops reopened a major highway into Saigon. U.S. planes battered an airfield far north of Hanoi. Three American aircraft were reported lost in operations elsewhere in Indochina.

Observers Now Believe McGovern Can Carry Illinois

by BOB LAHEY
A News Analysis
Can George McGovern carry Illinois?
Yes.

Those who predict that he WILL, remain as scarce as Coolidge campaign buttons. But the numbers of those who now believe it possible are growing.

Both Republican and Democratic sources are drawing back from predictions of an overwhelming landslide for President Nixon, especially in Illinois.

A veteran Republican who has been watching Illinois elections for four decades, and McGovern's Illinois campaign manager — in recent conversations with the Herald — gave strikingly similar assessments of the 1972 presidential campaign.

Among the conclusions which each put forth:

—The American public was disposed to vote against Richard M. Nixon at the time of the Democratic National Convention.

—But, early mistakes in the McGovern campaign prevented him from appearing as a palatable alternative.

—McGovern's campaign has finally coughed into high gear and he is steadily grinding away at Nixon's lead.

—The polls which continue to show Nixon a runaway should neither reassure Republicans nor dismay Democrats.

THOSE VIEWS ARE shared by Harold Rainville, for more than 20 years the chief aide and political adviser to the late Sen. Everett M. Dirksen; and Lt. Gov. Paul Simon, who heads the McGovern campaign effort in Illinois.

Rainville disdains the polls, declaring that they are of use only if you understand their weaknesses, which he feels hardly any voters, and few political observers, do.

The polls, he explains, purport to represent trends among 100 per cent of the eligible voters. But, he points out, seldom do more than 80 per cent of those voters register. And seldom do more than 75 per cent of those registered actually go to the polls.

A little arithmetic shows then that the outcome of the election depends on probably not more than 60 per cent of the total electorate. The significant figure in a poll, then, is not 51 per cent, but 31 per cent. "Anytime your opponent shows more than 30 per cent, you have to figure he's in the running — depending on who's lying," said Rainville.

He and Simon also agree that the most significant figure in current polls is the tremendously high "undecided" vote. With polls showing as many as 35 or 45 per cent undecided, they bear out the assessment of the two men that voters are not strongly for either candidate, and the outcome could be decided in the final days or hours of the campaign.

RAINVILLE POINTS OUT that Nixon carried Illinois by only 130,000 votes in 1968 (while Dirksen's margin was 358,000). With nearly 1½ million new voters going to the polls, the youth vote could wipe out that margin by going two-to-one for McGovern, again figuring on only 60 per cent of the voting.

And despite the polls, in a state still nearly evenly split between Republicans and Democrats, Rainville asks, "How many Democrats — who aren't mad at the local ticket — will really vote for Nixon?"

Again, Simon agrees with Rainville on the youth vote, despite polls showing Nixon in the lead among new voters. "It's just the feeling you get on campuses," said Simon, "that McGovern runs way ahead."

More clear, concedes Simon, is the fact that if this were election day, "we would lose." But, he adds, "It is equally clear that we are gaining."

Paul H. Simon

He compares the current campaign to 1968, when Hubert Humphrey started equally as far back as McGovern, but closed to 7/10ths of 1 per cent by election day.

It is the same kind of campaign, he said, in which no single issue has caught the attention of the voter, and "the only strategy" has been to register voters, canvass precincts, and get out the vote.

DESPITE THEIR weaknesses, polls are still used by political strategists themselves, and Simon says McGovern's studies in Illinois show "a steady erosion of Nixon strength and a steady gain by McGovern."

He makes no claim that the polls — 50 phone calls in half a dozen counties each week — are in the least scientific. "But they give us a gauge of our own, and the most striking thing about them has been steady increases for McGovern."

But in the end, both Rainville and Simon return to the premise that people will vote against Richard Nixon if George McGovern gives them a reason to do so.

"The Eagleton affair has been the biggest single thing which has interfered," said Simon. The removal of Missouri Sen. Thomas Eagleton as candidate for vice president remains the chief topic of discussion among voters whom he encounters. But Simon, who was among those who urged Eagleton's retention, also concedes that Eagleton himself might have been the single issue of the campaign, had he been retained.

Simon says he is dismayed, but not surprised, that issues such as the Watergate and ITT scandals have not enflamed the voters. "The average guy just doesn't identify with them," he observed.

But because there are no clear-cut issues ("An issue only exists if it affects everyone," says Rainville.) of any magnitude, the two political veterans agree the election remains balanced on the precarious question of "who they decide they like."

THAT, CONCLUDES Rainville, is why Nixon's advisers are keeping him in a low profile — McGovern calls it "hiding" — in the White House.

The less Nixon is out on the campaign trail, the less chance there is for a mistake. "If he falls on his face," says Rainville, "he could give people a reason for voting against him — and it only takes a simple, dramatic mistake.

Community Chest Aids Many Local Agencies

"People Helping People" is the theme for this year's Des Plaines Community Chest fund drive, a part of the Metropolitan Crusade of Mercy. With Jordan A. Minerva as campaign chairman, and John R. Heddens Jr. as president, the chest is striving to raise $53,000 locally to be distributed with funds from the Metro Crusade to 16 qualified agencies now serving a population here of nearly 60,000.

Among the agencies benefitting in the Des Plaines area are:

THE SALVATION ARMY: SERVICE UNIT AND COMMUNITY COUNSELING CENTER. A community counseling center at 1797 Oakton St. in Des Plaines, the Salvation Army last year handled 834 cases involving financial, marital, parent-child, personality, and unwed mother problems. Other services include the emergency relief team, among the first on the scene during every major disaster and particularly evident during the recent suburban area floods. Day-by-day assistance is also provided to individuals and families in temporary difficulty; complete vision care service to needy children and the elderly and comfort for hospitalized veterans, shut-ins and prison inmates. Through their dedicated efforts, the "hands of mercy" are extended to troubled people everywhere.

NORTHWEST SUBURBAN AID FOR THE RETARDED. With a current capacity of 30 retarded young people and adults supervised by three full-time staff members and four volunteers, this agency places equal emphasis in the reality of work productivity and the art of socialization. Training is provided in social behavior, basic academics, safety, hygiene, home economics, grounds maintenance, singing, physical education including swimming and varied arts and crafts.

A six unit Baldwin Electro-piano Laboratory was installed in February, 1972 and is utilized for a whole range of psychosomatic therapy twice weekly. Extramural activities include field trips and singing engagements. Supportive services include family counseling, psychological and aptitude tests and speech therapy. Plans for 1972 include a residential community living facility for high-level retarded adults. Under the direction of Lawrence V. Valentine, this agency performs a valuable function to the Northwest suburban community.

NORTHWEST SUBURBAN HOME-MAKER SERVICE. This helpful agency provides trained Homemakers and Home-Health Aides who come into the home during a time of stress, such as a mother's illness, to provide immediate care for the children. The Homemaker-Home-Health Aide may also serve the aged or chronically ill in order to help them continue living in their own cherished homes. Since becoming a participating agency in the Des Plaines Community Chest in April, 1972, the Service has provided Des Plaines families with 864 hours of homemaker assistance and is increasing its staff to provide significantly more service by year's end. Community Chest support for 1973 should make possible still more hours of care.

NORTHWEST SUBURBAN YMCA. With its basic objective being to aid in the development of Christian standards of living, conduct and life purpose in its member and constituency, the YMCA provides many valuable community services. In the attainment of its goal, the association seeks to promote the physical, mental and spiritual welfare of persons. A voluntary organization, not tax supported, the program offers activities and services for families, adults and children alike, striving for educational, social and physical development.

PLACE FOR PEOPLE DROP-IN CENTER. A unique community service center, the Place For People is entering a new era this fall. The center, which had an attendance of between 500-600 high school age people last year, opened October 1 with a number of activities designed to attract the interest of the youth of Des Plaines. Art night, theater night, a free film theater, a coffee house and community/social action night will all offer structured programs. The remaining nights and every afternoon of the week will be open for drop-in, a time for young people to play games and just talk with their friends. John Dronsfield, 26, new director of Place For People, sees the center as a place with great potential, helping young Des Plaines area people with any of their problems as well as providing a center of constructive social activity.

GIRL SCOUT COUNCIL OF NORTHWEST COOK COUNTY. The agency presently has over 2000 girls registered in four levels of Girl Scouting plus over 400 adult volunteers. Important community-minded services include the Camping Program, Keep America Beautiful Day in April, the Cookie Drive, Christmas Decorating, various ecology projects, Community Chest assistance, FISH organization aid, entertainment for the Golden Agers and assistance in providing swimming classes for the handicapped. This worthwhile organization not only provides invaluable assistance to young girls in the Des Plaines area but also, numerous services to all members of the community.

THE U.S.O. The United Service Organization is incorporated not-for-profit for the purpose of aiding in the defense program of the United States by serving the spiritual, educational, recreational and welfare needs of all members of the armed forces and their families. Numerous service men and their families, within the Northwest suburban area, have been assisted by this worthwhile organization as well as men and women serving our country in places throughout the world. Recently, USO-sponsored charter flights have brought hundreds of servicemen home from Vietnam for regular leaves in the United States, with their families at a significantly reduced roundtrip fare. This is just one of the many projects sponsored by this worthwhile group.

THE NORTHWEST SUBURBAN COUNCIL OF THE BOY SCOUTS OF AMERICA. Providing assistance and guidance to Northwest suburban young men, the Boy Scout Council strives to help in their social, spiritual and physical development. The Boy Scouts of America have recently instituted a completely new and improved program for boys 11 to 17 years of age to meet the needs of our changing world. The new program concerns itself with how an individual makes decisions, how a boy perceives his broadening world, and how a Scout can learn to accept responsibility for his personal growth, values and attitudes. Parents can now look to the Boy Scouts of America for a unique training program for their sons, totally relevant to today's world.

METROPOLITAN CHICAGO COUNCIL OF THE CAMPFIRE GIRLS AND THE DES PLAINES POLICE BOYS CLUB. Both youth organizations serve the goal of helping young boys and girls to develop and some day assume the role of responsible, socially-concerned adults. The Campfire Girls have sponsored numerous programs not only for the social and physical development of northwest suburban and Chicago-area girls but also, for the purpose of aiding needy persons throughout the area. The Des Plaines Police Boys Club has also strived for involvement of our community's boys in projects which teach them not only personal physical and mental development but also, to help those less fortunate than themselves through community involvement in various projects for the needy.

WELFARE FUNDS OF HOLY FAMILY AND LUTHERAN GENERAL HOSPITALS. Both funds, serving many Des Plaines area residents and others throughout the northwest suburbs, assist the patients in paying for hospital services received. In their moments of stress and illness, needy persons throughout the community are helped to find the comfort and physical care that they do desperately need but can not afford. Persons of all ages are benefited by both of these extremely worthwhile funds and the devoted services of the hospitals' skilled medical professionals.

MAINE TOWNSHIP MENTAL HEALTH ASSOCIATION. Incorporated in 1966, this organization was founded for the purpose of developing a mental health program in Maine Township. It is striving to avoid long-term treatment and to provide comprehensive services from youth to old age, from individual and family counseling to acute psychiatric care, rehabilitations and a wide variety of special services including treatment and follow-up for alcohol and drug addiction. Its personnel are truly devoted to this cause which has already assisted numerous northwest suburban families.

CLEARBROOK CENTER. A few short years ago, the parents of retarded Des Plaines area children found it difficult to get professional help to train their children to be as self-sufficient as possible. Today, children and adults can be brought to the attention of the Clearbrook Center for the retarded, where a staff of trained professionals analyze and assist in this development to self-sufficiency. Many children who attended Clearbrook Center classes a few years ago, are now being served in public schools. Others are working and taking care of themselves instead of depending on their families and the public. Truly a result-producing organization, the Clearbrook Center has reached out and touched loved ones from numerous families throughout the area.

Also under consideration is the NORTHWEST SUBURBAN DAY-CARE CENTER which provides invaluable child-care services to the community.

Some Issues Still To Be Clarified

Teachers, Board Draw Up Contract

Representatives of the High School Dist. 214 administration and teachers met yesterday to draw up wording on parts of the 1972-73 salary contract in preparation for a vote by the teachers this week.

The two sides were drawing up contract language for those issues they agreed upon ... and clarifying issues — all dealing with money — that they still have not agreed on.

Richard Chierico, chairman of the negotiations team for the Dist. 214 Education Association, said association officials will meet with teachers in the seven high schools Thursday to explain the issues in the contract dispute.

On Friday, he said, the teachers will be asked to vote on whether to accept the last offer presented by the board's negotiating team, and will also be able to express their opinions on the recommended settlement presented by a professional fact-finder and on the association's last offer.

Supt. Edward Gilbert said yesterday he did not know whether the full school board will meet prior to the teachers vote to endorse the offer made by the association. Under terms of the negotiations procedure, the full board will at some point have to act officially on the fact-finders report.

Neither the teachers nor the board has yet made public the precise terms of the various offers being discussed. On Sunday, they did say, however, that one of the issues is whether to tie all salaries in a precise percentage to the base pay.

Chierico said once the teachers have voted on the final offers the two sides will make public their positions as required by their negotiations procedure.

The two sides began bargaining last week for the first time since May when the professional fact-finder submitted his report. Teachers are now working under the terms of the 1971-72 contract which contains a no-strike clause.

Ogilvie Gives Hard Sell On School Funding Plan

Gov. Richard Ogilvie gave his proposals for increasing the funding of Illinois schools the hard sell last night to a meeting of school principals, but soft-pedaled his proposal to freeze real estate property taxes.

Speaking at the Illinois Principals' Association conference at Arlington Park Towers in Arlington Heights, the governor detailed the school financing proposals he will make to a special session of the General Assembly, but barely touched on the tax freeze proposal he will also make.

Earlier in the day, Ogilvie had told a press conference he is calling a special session of the legislature for late November. He said he will ask the legislators to freeze property taxes and allocate the state's $100 million in revenue sharing monies to schools.

Without spelling out his tax plan to the principals, Ogilvie said he had proposed to "provide the first real tax relief in Illinois history."

HE ADDED, "The real key to tax relief is careful attention to the needs of Illinois schools. I will not sacrifice quality education on the altar of political expediency. In addition to making the 'lion's share" of the state's revenue sharing money available to schools, Ogilvie said, "We can make it possible for the cities, counties and township governments which will receive $200 million to make some of their money available for schools where local conditions warrant."

Ogilvie received the warmest response of his half hour speech when he told the group, "We in Springfield are prepared to offer every conceivable form of technical, financial and manpower assistance, but we have no intention of imposing our decisions as long as I'm governor on those of you who are on the firing line."

The governor also said that during his term Illinois has gone from 47th in state support of education to 25th. In a veiled swipe at his Democratic opponent Dan Walker, he added, "That is hardly the record of neglect that some people have tried to portray."

In what appeared to be another reference to Walker, the governor said, "Everyone's for better schools and now that motherhood and the flag are somewhat suspect in certain quarters, better schools may be the only thing left for political rhetoric. But it's not enough to be for better schools. What we need is a record of concern and of strong commitment."

AN ORIENTATION MEETING to acquaint high school coeds with the local Junior Miss Pageant was held recently at Rolling Meadows High School. Pam Wier, Paddock Publications, and Illinois Junior Miss of 1968-69, attended the meeting to answer questions raised by this year's group of contestants in the background are Barbara Joan Gergol of Des Plaines, 1971-72 Paddock and Illinois Junior Miss who was third runnerup in the national contest; and Anne Chalakis, director of the Paddock pageant.

Junior Miss Entry Deadline Friday

The deadline for entering the Paddock Publications Junior Miss Pageant is Friday.

Forty-four high school senior girls have entered the pageant that will award $1,700 in scholarships.

Coeds having "B" averages or better and who are currently attending high schools located within the circulation area of Paddock Publications, are eligible to enter.

Schools included are Arlington, Conant, Elk Grove, Forest View, Fremd, Hersey, Palatine, Prospect, Rolling Meadows, Sacred Heart, Schaumburg and Wheeling. In addition, Des Plaines girls attending Maine West or Maine East are eligible.

Contestants are judged on scholarship, poise, fitness and talent.

THE PAGEANT will be held Sunday, Nov. 26, at which time the two misses chosen to compete in the state pageant will each receive a scholarship of $500. The two runnersup will receive $250 apiece and additional scholarships of $100 will be awarded to the girl with the highest scholastic achievement and to the one with the most talent.

Entry blanks have been distributed to those eligible to compete through the individual high schools. They should be returned to Anne Chalakis, pageant director, at Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, no later than Friday. Additional information is available through Mrs. Chalakis, 394-2300.

Women In Politics

They Are Working For Their Party

by DOROTHY OLIVER

When there's a slate of candidates to be elected, when there are offices to be staffed, mailings to get out, calls to make and questions to answer...

When there's an election to run, when there are judges to be recruited, polling places to set up, materials to sort and votes to tally...

When that all-important Tuesday in November is just around the corner, when a candidate needs support and help... he turns to his regular party organizations — the people he knows are behind him and ready to work.

Many of those workers — here and around the country — are women. Both behind the scenes and out on the streets their dedication and time are invaluable to the regular political organizations.

"ABOUT 95 PER CENT of our internal operations are handled by women," said Nicholas Blase, Maine Township Democratic committeeman. "About 25 per cent of the precinct work — the people who knock on doors — is also done by women. We depend on them... There's no way we could run this organization without them."

Fifty of the 150 active regular Democratic women are members of the Des Plaines Democratic Women's Club. It is the only Democratic club for women still operating in Maine Township and its membership has been working on the upcoming election since before the primary last spring.

"One of our main purposes is to educate our members on the views and qualifications of the Democratic candidates as well as all civic matters," said Peggy Barry, president of the Des Plaines Democratic Women's Club.

"WE HAVE HELD picnics and invited candidates so our members can meet them on an informal basis. In September we had a panel from New Trier Township come in and speak on McGovern and Oct. 26 we will have at least three candidates speak at our meeting," she said.

Members are encouraged to join a specific campaign and work for a candidate as well as give their time to the Maine Township Democratic Organization.

The majority of members work precincts, going door to door to answer questions, encourage people to vote and present the platforms of their candidates. Others are poll watchers, election judges or volunteer workers at the Maine headquarters in Niles.

The situation is similar on the other side of the ballot. The Maine Township Republican Woman's Club members are also hard at work.

"WE'VE BEEN WORKING since January," said Kay Korff, a member of the club. "Candidates in the primaries spoke at our meetings and during the primary election we staffed (Maine Township Republican) headquarters. After the primaries we started working on registration of voters. Precinct captains gave us a list of unregistered voters and we went out and tried to get them to register."

"Since Sept. 18 we've been staffing headquarters from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. to answer phones, give voting information, registration information, dates, etc. A vital area of our work is educating the public — presenting the issues, letting them know where the polling places are, doing whatever we can."

All year club members have been holding coffees in their homes for candidates. Other members, neighbors and friends are invited to attend these sessions. A large picnic was held last May to introduce candidates to the public.

THE CLUB DOES NOT contain its activities to Maine Township. "We are working with the 10th Congressional Club for Sam Young (candidate for Congress) because he is unknown in this area. We go down to the Loop to work at headquarters and are concerned with helping wherever we're needed," said Vivian Weaver, president of the organization.

Their cooperation has spread to the Des Plaines campaign headquarters for Charles Percy and the Glenview headquarters for Richard Nixon and Richard Ogilvie. "Maine Township has never refused aid to anyone. We're all working towards one thing — the election of qualified Republican candidates," Mrs. Korff said.

The job of the two clubs has been made more difficult since the redistricting of state legislative districts. Des Plaines now falls into three legislative districts — the 5th, 4th and 3rd — and there are many more candidates for the clubs to worry about. Local candidates have been joined by men and women whose names are unknown in this town and it has been the goal of both clubs to make them known.

ON ELECTION DAY few of these women will be interested onlookers.

WITH THE ELECTION less than a month away regular political organization workers are busy contacting voters on the precinct level by distributing literature, making phone calls and knocking on doors. Kay Korff, left, and Vivian Weaver of the Maine Township Republican Women's Club are spending many of their days helping staff the township GOP headquarters. Women of both parties are volunteering their time and energy in preparation for the election.

"Without the active work of regular political organizations I don't know how an election could be conducted," asserted Floyd Fulco, Maine Township Republican committeeman, pointing out that the county clerk relies heavily on the organizations to provide judges and take care of the mechanics of the election on the local level. "We rely quite a bit on our women workers; they do outstanding work."

And work they will — both Republicans and Democrats. They will be judges, poll watchers, and checkers; they will staff headquarters, make phone calls, drive voters to the polls, tally votes and keep the coffee pots filled.

And after all of their months of work they, too, will be voting. Despite their affiliation with their clubs and their party some will be voting split tickets.

"I DON'T THINK all of us vote a straight ticket," said Mrs. Barry. "Those days are pretty well past. There's too much independent thinking. We endorse the whole ticket as an organization but I don't think anybody lets anyone dictate to them how to vote."

Once it's over? "It will be a chance to sit back and relax until the next election," Mrs. Weaver smiled. But the next election is not far off. Township elections will be held next spring and both groups will have a new slate of candidates to learn about, publicize and support.

The Home Line by Dorothy Ritz

Dear Dorothy: When a recipe calls for scalded milk, I inevitably end up scorching it and feel like an idiot. What's the trick to this simple cooking stunt? —Shirley Monroe.

Don't be embarrassed. This may be the most delicate and trickiest of all the cooking arts. The timing is so precise that the least slip can result in the albumin (milk protein) sticking to the bottom and sides of the pan — and, moreover, you can get scorching when the fire is a fraction too high.

An old-time trick is to take the pan in which the milk is to be scalded and rinse it with ice-cold water before pouring in the milk. Then keep stirring. It's scalded if you see even the first tiny bubble. You go by the steam and an alertness that tells you you are about to get a bubble. Take it off the heat instantly. You can still use it with a touch of scorch. You can scald milk without any trouble in a double boiler but it takes three times as long. When through, soak the pan in cold water.

Dear Dorothy: Worms have built tents in one of our trees. A neighbor said you know how to get rid of them. —Vivian C. "Only way I know is to burn them — tying newspapers on a long green branch (with a wire tie) and raising it to the tent. Best thing is to wait until twilight, when most of the things are in their nests. Sometimes you have to use a ladder and cut branches down because you can't reach them with the improvised flame thrower. It isn't fun, but it's the only way to kill them."

Dear Dorothy: Have always been grateful for the hint in your column which suggested using rug shampoo for stains in our cottons. It usually works diluted with a little water but if the stain is stubborn, full-strength rug shampoo invariably does the job. —Ann B.

Grove Crushes Falcons In South Showdown

by MIKE KLEIN

Elk Grove and Hersey again in the Mid-Suburban League Super Bowl?

We won't know about Hersey for a couple weeks, but it's almost a certainty that Elk Grove will represent the South Division.

The Grenadiers of coach Don Schmake thoroughly dominated Forest View last Friday night for a sparkling 40-7 win over the Falcons.

That left Elk Grove all alone in first place of the South Division. Forest View slipped to 3-1 and had been considered the Grenadiers' only competition for the divisional title.

Elk Grove will close its season against Conant, Glenbard North and Schaumburg. All have losing records.

While the Grenadiers have solidified their South Division position, Hersey, Palatine and Rolling Meadows remain tied for first in the North.

It leaves open the possibility for an Elk Grove-Hersey rematch at season's end. The two schools have already met three times since the 1971 season began.

Hersey took the regular season game last fall, 10-0. But Elk Grove squeaked by, 7-3, in the frigid Super Bowl.

The Grenadiers made it two straight with a 20-8 second game win over the Huskies this fall.

It sets the stage for what could be a great fourth game in two years between the schools when the Mid-Suburban League holds its Super Bowl on Friday, Nov. 10.

Last Friday night, the Grenadiers left little doubt in the minds of Mid-Suburban football fans. They're an outstanding football team, possibly the best this area has seen in years.

But after shutting off Forest View's first drive at their four-yard line, it was all Grenadiers in last Friday's unexpected mismatch at Elk Grove.

The Grenadiers accumulated 418 yards total offense, 309 rushing. Jeff Schroeder continued to run rampant, this week picking up 187 yards and three touchdowns.

Jeff Stewart, Elk Grove's fine senior quarterback, tossed three touchdown passes and rushed 16 times for 94 yards.

It was a pair of Stewart touchdown pitches that broke Forest View's back early. He'd thrown just one TD pass until Friday night but tossed two to Frank Bavaro and one to Bill Butler before half-time.

"We were shocked by those two quick passing touchdowns," admitted a dejected Paul Jordan, Forest View head coach. "That really took our confidence away."

"But if they had continued outthitting us the rest of the way like they did, I suppose those early scores wouldn't have mattered anyway."

In the game's opening drive, Forest View had driven 72 yards in 12 plays to Elk Grove's four-yard line. Most yardage was gained by John Kronforst, Forest View's fine junior halfback who rushed 89 yards in defeat.

But Elk Grove held. And Stewart started pitching passes all over the field. Butler snared 10 and 20-yard passes before Bavaro's 35-yard touchdown reception.

Don Weadley's pass interception and 42-yard return to the Falcon 23 gave Stewart another chance to connect with Bavaro. And he did, for 16 yards and a 14-0 lead after the second of Gary Adams' four conversion kicks.

The Grenadier lead swelled to 27-0 at halftime on a one-yard plunge by Schroeder and Stewart's 14-yard pass to Butler.

Elk Grove and the Falcons traded touchdowns in the third quarter. Schroeder went five yards to make it 33-0. Then the Falcons got their only touchdown on Dave Matz's four-yard run. Chuck Mende booted the extra point.

Schroeder continued Grove's domination with his one-yard plunge in the fourth quarter. Adams converted to end all scoring.

Elk Grove travels to Conant this Friday night while Forest View hosts Schaumburg.

Among North Division leaders, Hersey will get a shot at Rolling Meadows on Friday night at Hersey and Palatine travels to Wheeling.

EATING GRASS. Maine South's Jim Lyons (84) Maine West defenders had him rather quickly caught three Mike Swider passes for 60 yards last Saturday. But most everytime he had the ball, Here, Danny Myska, on the ground, and an unidentifiable Warrior send Lyons toward a mouthful of grass. Myska scored three touchdowns for Maine West in a 46-9 win. Impressive Victory For St. Viator

'The Key' And Defense Lead Lions

No, Mike Dougherty didn't quarterback St. Viator against Holy Cross Sunday.

No, the area's local parochial school hadn't retired potential all-star Stan Bobowski's jersey early in the first quarter at River Grove.

Most always No. 12, Bobowski faked out quite a few Lion fans for a while by wearing Dougherty's number after his scrambling cost him his jersey. Although the hosting Crusaders knew it was Stan after the quick change, he still fooled and faked the talented team of Coach Frank Mariani for a very big 14-9 victory.

"Our defensive ends had trouble containing Bobowski," said Mariani after seeing the Crusaders' chances for a Suburban Catholic Conference Eastern Division title just about fade away. "He's the key."

"The Key" led his team into the Holy Cross end zone in the first two quarters with timely passes and equally efficient running plays.

"The first punt of the game was the turning point," said Mariani. "Like I've said, we've been averaging 40 or 45 yards a punt."

A 20-yarder let St. Viator set up on the Crusader 30. A short time later Frank Cliggett went over from the seven.

Midway through the second quarter, a six-yard punt allowed the Lions to begin their march from the Holy Cross 47.

"We never figured to turn over the ball like that," said the Crusader coach. "That's the first time we ever turned over the ball on that side of the field (via a punt)."

St. Viator's drive seemed to stall on the Cross two as Stan was stopped for no gain. After a consultation with head coach Jim Lyne, Tom Maher took a pitch and raced around left end for the score.

"We had the feeling we could score at any time," said Lyne. "We didn't pass as much as we could have. We felt pretty confident he (Stan) could pass when he wanted to."

Jim Lyne

Frank Mariani

Stan completed six straight before missing his last two tosses of the ball. He hit on six of nine for 55 yards, but he only attempted one in the second half.

Lyne dismissed the notion that his team played conservatively in the second half.

"Field position dictated that," he said. "We didn't tell him to cool it on the passes."

The Lion defenders were even more adept at keeping the Crusaders' potent wishbone offense at bay. Averaging 400 yards a game, the loser could eke out just 64.

If you asked before the game that we'd hold them under 70 yards, I'd probably have said no," remarked Lyne. "I was surprised with the efficiency of our defensive ball club."

Besides singling out co-captain Ralph Bosch, a tackle, and end Andy Michuda, Lyne also praised defensive coordinator Sal Nuccio and secondary coach Bill Tirmann.

Pat Mahoney, who handles the offensive line, was also lauded for sometimes performing miracles with kids who aren't 100 per cent, according to Lyne.

The only scores the state ranked Crusaders could manage off the also highly rated Lions was through aggressive defensive play. A blocked punt led to a safety and a blind side hit produced a 45-yard touchdown.

Despite the narrow lead, Lyne wasn't too worried. The reason — old No. 11.

"He wins football games with brains and with his desire," said Stan's coach. "Bobowski, especially in the Lane Tech game, had super stats. People began pointing at him."

"People are coming up with special defense — a heck of a compliment. He's still a great quarterback without super stats. He's coming up with the big play when he has to. He's doing the intangible things right now that are helping us win."

"He's probably not going to have great rushing yardage with people pointing at him. A defense can do that...can stop one player."

However, Lyne added that St. Viator's balanced attack is upsetting the plans of the opposition. And, halfway through the season, it is carrying on the pre-season hopes of the Lions.

That's a tough proposition since St. Viator's had one tough challenge after another so far this season. Mariani thinks they've got a chance.

"I can't see anybody beating Viator," said St. Viator's first head coach in the early 1960s. "Only team I can possibly see — if they get their quarterback back — is Marist. They're hitters."

After seeing his team's 10-game winning streak ended as well as only his 20th loss in 67 games, Mariani knows that he lost to an outstanding St. Viator team.

One thing's for sure, the school had better order plenty of extra No. 12 jerseys for the remainder of the season.

20 Earn Positions In 'Excellence' Programs

One hundred twenty-eight were called, but only 20 were chosen. And seven of those were from Arlington Heights.

That was the situation early this week at River Trails Tennis Center, Mount Prospect, where boys aged 9 through 18 from Chicago and 19 suburban communities competed for 20 spots in three Chicago District Tennis Association-sponsored "Excellence" programs.

Arlington Heights, led by Jim Merkel, John Paczkowski and Don Rodig in the 16-18 division, finished well ahead of the pack. Its other selectees are Jeff Davenport, Mike Doering and Brad Weber in 13-15 and Tom Pritchard in 12 and under.

Des Plaines claimed three places. They belong to Steve Wild, Paddock junior champion, in 16-18 and Jeff Trecker and Norm Peterson in 13-15. Palatine, with Matt Borman in 16-18 and Ken Kohl in 13-15, had two selectees. So did Mount Prospect, with Bruce Fischer in 13-15 and Andy Risteen in 12 and under. So did Park Ridge with George Charuk and Tom Wilkas in 12 and under.

The 16-18s will be enhanced by Robby White, a 15-year-old from Deerfield, who was ranked fourth last year among the CDTA's 143. Other selectees:

16-18 — Steve Pauly, Wood Dale, and

12 and under — Johnny Grant, Park Ridge; Eddie Dippel, Arlington Heights; Sean Duffy, Chicago, and Daniel Weiss, Schaumburg, alternates.

The "Excellence" concept, now eight years old, has been a major factor in raising Chicago-area junior tennis to all-time-high national levels. With the CDTA paying most of the freight, more than 300 promising youngsters who survive tryouts are given four months of intensive training under topnotch professional instructors at 17 indoor locations from Lake Forest to Harvey and from Chicago to Wheaton. The best dividends so far: Billy Martin, Sue Stap, Sandy Stap and Ted Staren.

Is Television Slowing Down Golf?

by MURRAY OLDERMAN

NAPA, Calif. — (NEA) — That old debill, television, is getting blamed again. The issue now is slow play on the golf course during professional tournaments.

"There's not a round goes by," says Bob Lunn, the big bear of a man who swals a ball as far as Jack Nicklaus, "when the foursome I'm playing in doesn't start talking about how long it takes to play — and how it's getting longer all the time."

Since a pro like Lunn plays some 35 tournaments a year, and plays four rounds each tournament, plus pro-ams, that means at least 150 discussions devoted to the predisposition of some players to linger endlessly over the pellet before striking it.

And all the time we thought the rapping between players during a round centered either on the sexual proclivities of the snuggled blonde behind the fifth green or the pronation of the wrists to fade a shot with just the right calibration on a tree-lined dogleg right.

So where does television fit into this act?

"It," says Johnny Miller, with shining bright eyes and cotton hair, one of the rising young stars, "is where they all learn to play slow."

"The young kids coming up, they've been watching all the big names of golf fussing over their shots, playing it real slow. So they figure that's the way to do it, too."

Any discussion of slow play leads naturally to Nicklaus, who has often been accused of dawdling and has this habit of standing interminably over his putts.

"Actually," says Miller, "Jack isn't one of the slow ones. Besides, it doesn't matter with him. He's always playing in the last foursome on the course anyhow."

Johnny grins tightly. The dictates of TV always save the best for last, and since Nicklaus is generally leading, the pace of his play isn't going to affect the field.

Lunn and Miller, tuning up for the Kaiser Open at Silverado as the days of the tour dwindled down for '72, are genuinely concerned about the effect of slow play on the popularity of their game. They are, ironically, part of the tour's younger generation, whom they themselves have pin-pointed as the major culprits. Lunn is 27; Miller is 25.

"But we," says Johnny, "are already from a different era than the guys coming out of college now. Why, I remember playing national juniors in two hours and 15 minutes. That's because when we learned to play golf, we couldn't afford to pay those green fees, so we had to sneak on the course early in the morning before anybody got there or play late in the afternoon and we had to hustle around."

No one has to push the old-timers like Doug Ford and Julius Boros. They just step up and hit the ball. So does Lee Trevino. Of course, a wily gray-head like Doug Sanders isn't above slowing up his game to psyche an opponent. He played a TV match with Miller, and Johnny is convinced that Sanders deliberately twiddled between taps to upset him, knowing how Johnny felt about delays.

The Professional Golfers Association is conscious of the lagging tempo and its officials are empowered to impose two-stroke penalties when golfers hold up play, the same way a baseball umpire theoretically can call a ball on a pitcher who scratches and squirms too long between pitches. But the PGA people are generally loathe to do it (for one thing, they're employed by the players).

"And two strokes," says Lunn, "is pretty severe. I'd rather see them fine the players. Start taking 50 and 100 bucks out of their mouths, and they'll speed up."

The other inequity is that under the current rules all the members of an offending foursome are penalized for the time transgressions of one slow player.

"So," notes Miller, "supposing Rod Funseth, who generally flies around the course, gets stuck for a round with a guy who takes too much time. You can play as fast as your slowest player. It wouldn't be fair to Rod to stick him with two strokes."

The only hope may be to keep the TV cameras from focusing on all those post-eriors frozen over putts, ingraining bad habits in the youth of America. They could use action inserts of the Ding-a-Ling Sisters until the guy actually strokes the ball.

Harper Heads Invite; Now 7-0 In Dual Meets

It was a very profitable and enjoyable weekend for Harper College's ever-improving cross country team.

The Hawks made people sit up and take notice when they won the 17-team Milwaukee Tech Invitational Saturday after running their dual meet record to 7-0 with a double win Thursday.

The impressive showings prompted coach Bob Nolan to comment, "I can't say enough about our top three runners — Ron Hankel, Bill Bates and Mike DeLa Bruere. They're really coming into their own. We'll have a good shot at winning our Region." (This is something the Hawks have not yet done though winning the Skyway Conference title the past two seasons.)

The victory in Saturday's big meet, which included 120 runners, was a real squeaker. Harper and Wright of Chicago actually finished in a tie in points but Harper was awarded the victory because it topped Wright, 26-29 in dual-meet scoring.

Highest finishers among other teams near this area were Trilon in sixth place and DuPage (which has won the Region the last two years) in seventh.

Wright had the individual winner with a standout 20:30 time for four miles.

Hankel was third with 21:33 and DeLa Bruere fourth, two seconds behind. Bates claimed sixth with 21:48.

John Geary, returning for the first time after being out with an injury, ran 23rd with 22:47. He was Harper's No. 2 man last year and could be a big help the rest of the way. "I thought he did very well considering he's only had two weeks to work out," said Nolan.

Just four seconds back of Geary was Tom Klinker with 22:51. Other Hawks were Larry Cyrier and Brian Rehman.

Harper had celebrated the first meet ever held on its own campus Thursday with easy victories of 17-45 over McHenry and 17-44 over Waubesa. That made it 23 wins in a row in dual meets dating back to October, 1970.

Hankel continued to be the team's No. 1 runner, winning the race in 21:17, four seconds ahead of Bates. DeLaBruere was third with 21:36, Klinker sixth with 23:11, Cyrier ninth with 24:37 and Mike Mills 10th with 24:58.

The Hawks go on the road to meet Amundsen and Lake County Wednesday and are in the DuPage Invitational Saturday morning. The biggest affair of the season, the Region IV meet, will be Saturday, Oct. 28 in Springfield.
